President defends U.N. air assaults in Somalia, warns of action in Bosnia

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON - President Clinton defended the use of American air power against a Somali warlord Tuesday despite civilian casualties and warned the United States also "would take action" if U.N. peacekeepers were attacked in the former Yugoslavia.

"Obviously we're going to protect our own soldiers," the president declared at a noon-time news conference.

Clinton also said he hasn't backed away from wanting to arm Bosnian Muslims and use air strikes against Bosnian Serbs to force a settlement in the Balkan war, although Britain, France and Russia have balked at his strategy.

"I still think they may be compelled to do that or something very near like it if they want to get anything done over there," Clinton said. He asserted his proposal "was never taken off the table."

The president met with reporters in the White House briefing room less than 24 hours after angrily cutting off a news conference when asked about "zigzag" decision-making on a Supreme Court nominee.

Trying to shake off a string of missteps on everything from gays in the military to problems with appointments, Clinton said vigorously that his administration was tackling difficult problems in the economy and in foreign policy.

"This is the most decisive presidency you've had in a very long time on all the big issues that matter," Clinton asserted.
