RATS! Officials test rodents for deadly virus

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUFKIN - Federal and state health officials on Wednesday tested rodents for a mysterious and deadly virus suspected in the death of an East Texas woman.

A 58-year-old registered nurse who died June 23 is a suspected victim of hantavirus, which has killed 11 people in the Four Corners states of New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Colorado.

John Bautch, district administrator at the Angelina County and Cities Health District, on Wednesday said preliminary lab results back up the suspicions.

"They found the presence of (hantavirus) antibodies," Bautch said. "In talking with TDH (Texas Department of Health) yesterday, they said it was highly suspected that it was the virus."

Final tests, being conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, should be completed in about two weeks, officials said.

A rodent trapped at the woman's home in Zavalla, about 22 miles southeast of Lufkin, was also being tested for the virus. In the Four Corners cases, the disease was found to have been spread by rodents.

Bautch said investigators from the CDC and the state health department were setting up shop in Zavalla on Wednesday to trap rodents there. Samples will be analyzed in Atlanta, officials said.

Deputies bust marijuana demonstration

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN MARCOS, Texas - A four-week demonstration in front of the Hays County jail to protest marijuana laws and support a hunger-striking inmate has been broken up by sheriff's deputies.

The protesters - who promote various uses for hemp, the plant marijuana comes from - had built a tent city on the lawn in front of the jail.

They support inmate Zeal Stefanoff, who has been serving time since June 3 for marijuana possession and ended a 34-day hunger strike early Tuesday. Stefanoff turned himself in to protest laws banning hemp use.

One demonstrator, Brett Stahl of San Marco, was charged Tuesday with criminal trespassing when he refused to vacate the grounds after a deputy's warning.

"The sheriff said I could stay here as long as I was passive and nonviolent," Stahl said before being carried off to jail.

Sheriff's department officials refused to comment on their reasons for forcing the protesters to leave.

"We feel that any further comment just glorifies their cause," said Lt. Dennis Gutierrez.

Sheriff Paul Hastings said last week he didn't mind the tent city protest, as long as the demonstrators weren't rowdy or breaking the law.
