"Another Stakeout" Starring Richard Dreyfuss, Emilio Estevez and Rosie O' Donnell Directed by John Badham Rated PG-13

Starts playing Friday

My expectations were not high hen I went to see "Another takeout." I thought it would be nother repetitive sequel on the der of "Lethal Weapon III" or Naked Gun 2 1/2." I mean, why wild anyone make a sequel to a ovie six years old?

But I was pleasantly surprised w this film, which could be one of the best comedies this summer. As a Disney production, it cerainly blows away their last reease, "Hocus Pocus." Chris Leece (Richard Dreyfuss) and Bill Reimers (Emilio Estevez) omplete the must reach surveillance duty under the direcion of Assistant District Attorney the clashing trio as they try to act out their cover as a normal American family on vacation.

Their assignment is to stake out a vacation home in Seattle, and see if a witness the state needs for an organized crime trial is one of the occupants. When the surveillance team invites the subjects over for dinner, comic mayhem ensues.

Neighbors Brian and Pam O'Hara (Dennis Farina and Marcia Strassman) are first bemused and then frightened by the crazed behavior of Barrett and Leece, who try to detain them while Reimers is bugging their house.

Dreyfuss, Estevez, and O'Donnell all excel in this film. It's an hour and forty minutes of sidesplitting, non-stop comedy.

"I've had my mustache 13 years," Reimers tells Barrett. How long have you had yours?' This and many other verbal duels between the team members make this one of the funniest films to come out in a long while.

Dreyfuss and Estevez are naturals acting together and O'Donnell A battle of wills ensues between is great in her part as the incompetent assistant district attorney.

"Another Stakeout" has the same humor that made the original "Stakeout" a hit way back in 1987, with enough of a change in plot that it's not just another stale sequel. There is continuity though - Leece is together with the girl he fell for during "Stakeout." But now her part is played by Sharon Maughan, better known as the mysterious woman from the Tasters' Choice Coffee commercials.

This is one of a few films this summer actually worth paying full admission price to see. (And it may even be even be worth a viewing later at the bargain matinee.)

The folks at Cavitt Street are law abiding citizens. There are several signs throughout the establishment disclaiming liability and warning minors. But the most noticeable is the no cussing sign. No unpleasantries are exchanged in the Cavitt

There is more to Cavitt Street than burgers and fries, however. Two pool tables stand in the middle of the dining area, both in fair-
