Senate approves Clinton's service plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A slimmed-down version of President Clinton's plan for students to earn some college tuition money through public service work won Senate approval Tuesday. Negotiators now must reconcile it with a somewhat broader House version.

Initial steps toward resolving differences already were under way as negotiators sought to have a compromise ready for final passage by end of the week, said a source close to the discussions.

"We're not sure we can do it, but it appears that all sides are agreeable to try," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Senate's 58-41 vote ended a vigorous partisan dispute that forced Clinton's original five-year,

Congress to hammer out differences

$9.5 billion plan to be sharply reduced. Clinton called senators after the vote to thank them.

The Senate's three-year program would cost $1.5 billion. The House approved a three-year arrangement at an estimated cost of $2.1 billion, though funding could vary under the House version.

"The administration is comfortable with either approach at this point," said Eli Segal, who directs Clinton's national service office.

"The differences between the bills are really quite small," he said, adding that both were "essentially identical" to Clinton's plan.

The biggest differences are in how many students could take part and how soon. Clinton wanted to allow 25,000 students in the first year and 150,000 by the third year.

The Senate version would allow 20,000 participants in the first year, 33,000 in the second year and 47,000 in the third year, assuming an average annual cost per participant of $15,000. The House would allow somewhat more students than the Senate during the three years.

The Senate numbers resulted from its decision to limit spending to $300 million in the first year of the program, $500 million in the second year and $700 million in the third year.

Other differences were primarily structural.

Both House and Senate versions would allow students who completed two years of community service work to receive $4,725 for each year to apply toward college tuition. Both the House and Senate reduced Clinton's figure from $5,000 to keep it lower than the $5,250 military people can receive under the longstanding GI bill.

Both House and Senate would provide living allowances of at least $7,400 a year and health-care and child day-care benefits.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the bill's Senate floor manager, said he wanted to see the program fully implemented more quickly but, "this is the legislative process and compromises have to be made."

"I don't think there was any compromise on the essential issues, but just on the pace of the program," he said told The Associated Press. "I think the essence of the program has been preserved."

by Democratic moderates who wanted deeper spending cuts.

Clinton took direct aim at his Republican opponents, labeling them anew as "guardians of gridlock" and saying their alternative plans had "less deficit reduction or more pain for ordinary Americans or both." Those GOP plans also were roundly defeated in Congress, Clinton said.

"Now there are only two choices: our plan or no plan," Clinton said.

The overall package calls for the deficit cuts over five years through a combination of higher taxes, mostly on wealthy individuals and corporations; and a variety of spending cuts, including deep cuts in military spending and in some domestic programs, including Medicare.

The House is expected to vote on the plan on Thursday and the Senate on Friday.

gasoline tax. The gasoline tax raises less money, but it affects more money."

Jones and Hazelton agreed that current gasoline prices are the lowest in years, and the extra tax will probably only raise fuel prices to levels common in the middle '80's.

"These are the lowest gas prices I remember in 10 or 12 years," Jones said. "Adding a few cents to the gallon will maybe raise them to where they were before. Nobody likes taxes, and I'll probably gripe about it when I go to the pumps, but it is fair. It is not the ideal program, but I as a citizen will support it without any hesitation."

Both professors agreed that the bill would most likely pass the House and Senate when it comes up for vote on Thursday and Friday.

"I believe they are now in a bargaining game with President Clinton," Hazelton said. "I think he has got the vote in the House. There are a few senators that are probably holding out, but I think he will get the bill through."

Jones said, "I think it will pass by a very small margin. The republicans will hold firm and not vote for it, but they do not have enough members to block its passage." Since there really has not been a coherent plan from the other side, I think it will pass."
