Elderly to get prescription benefits

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — America's 32 million elderly would get major new prescription drug benefits under Medicare for about $8 a month as part of President Clinton's health reforms, the White House has told advocates for seniors.

The White House blueprint also will feature long-term care benefits for both the aged and young people with serious disabilities, emphasizing home- and community-based care instead of institutions.

White House officials say seniors will be given the same prescription drug coverage as everybody else under the Clinton proposal, with a $250 annual deductible and 20 percent co-payments.

John Rother, legislative director for the American Association of Retired Persons, said Monday that Clinton aides told him the drug benefits will be worth $32 to $35 a month on average per senior citizen.

Seniors will be asked to bear 25 percent of those costs in the form of higher monthly Medicare Part B premiums.

That premium, now $36.60, helps pay doctor bills and other out-of-hospital expenses.

In addition, they would have to meet the $250 deductible and pay 20 percent of the cost of each prescription.

"Right now, a lot of seniors are forced to choose between filling prescriptions and paying for food and other necessities," said Ron Pollack, executive director of Families USA Foundation, another advocacy group.

An administration official said the elderly would be asked to pay 20 percent of the costs of the long-term care benefits on a sliding scale.

Those benefits will be phased in over five years, with states getting grants to furnish the services.

Rother said he was told the long-term benefits would be worth $80 a month and would cost the elderly roughly $20 a month.

The emphasis will be on services in the home, adult day care centers and other community facilities to help people retain their independence.

Pollack said the benefits will go to people who have trouble with at least three of five essential daily activities: getting out of bed, dressing, washing, using the toilet and eating.

The services could include help with cooking and cleaning, not just medical care, he said.

Medicare is going to "be under a lot of cost containment pressure" under the Clinton health plan, said Rother. But "it looks right now like a worthwhile tradeoff."

"The key question is, is there system-wide cost containment or is it just from Medicare and Medicaid?" said Rother. "If it were just Medicare and Medicaid, we'd be jumping through the roof."

Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., said, "Clearly the president has identified that the major gaps for seniors are the crushing costs of long-term care and the enormous drug bills they face. Many seniors are paying more out of pocket today than when Medicare began in 1965."

Wyden said, "It's not clear how those benefits are going to be financed. The challenge for the administration is to ensure that this doesn't become a shell game that cuts from core, needed basic Medicare in order to (pay for) long-term care and prescription drugs."

While Clinton plans to require most Americans to buy their health coverage through new regional alliances in each state, the Medicare program will remain apart for the time being. It also covers 3 million disabled workers under 65.

The White House official, who asked to remain anonymous, said people in a health alliance could choose to keep that coverage when they turn 65 instead of joining Medicare.

If they changed their minds later, they could switch to Medicare during an annual open enrollment period.

States will also be allowed eventually to fold Medicare into their health alliances, but they would have to guarantee senior citizens the same or better benefits and allow them to keep fee-for-service arrangements with their doctors if they wish, the official said.

"Right now, a lot of seniors are forced to choose between filling prescriptions and paying for food and other necessities."

— Ron Pollack, executive director of Families USA Foundation

Law could give blacks some control of Africa

The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Negotiators agreed Tuesday on a draft law that would give blacks a role in running the country for the first time in South Africa's history.

The bill would set up a Transitional Executive Council, a multiparty body that would assume joint control of some functions with the white-minority government even before multiracial elections in April. It would include members from Nelson Mandela's African National Congress and other black groups.

ANC National Chairman Thabo Mbeki said Tuesday night that approval of the transitional council by Parliament would allow the ANC to call for all remaining international economic sanctions to be lifted. He said such an announcement was likely by the end of the month.

The draft law would severely inhibit President F.W. de Klerk's power to act independently, requiring him to consult with the transitional council on security matters and any major changes to laws.

The draft law and three others approved by negotiators now go to Parliament, which convenes a special session next week.

Approval is expected because de Klerk's governing National Party supports the plan and controls the dominant white chamber of Parliament.

The panel would comprise members of all groups that have taken part at any time in the multiparty negotiations that began in December 1991. It would consist of a main council and seven subcommittees in such areas as law and order, finance, foreign affairs and the status of women.

Some groups opposed the measure Tuesday or have boycotted the talks altogether.

ANC Secretary-General Cyril Ramaphosa, the group's chief negotiator, called opposition to the transitional council "inconsequential" and said, "It won't stop us."

Pro-apartheid whites and some conservative leaders of black homelands oppose a transitional council and election. They fear domination by the ANC, the nation's leading black group, in a post-apartheid government and want guarantees of autonomous homelands where they can govern themselves.

The right-wing Conservative Party and Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi, head of the Inkatha Freedom Party, have warned of civil war if the plans for a transitional council and election proceed.

Izetbegovic wants peace plan altered

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic appealed Tuesday to the Security Council to support better terms for Muslims in a peace settlement and not to reward ethnic cleansing.

He plans to take the same message to the White House on Wednesday, when he is scheduled to meet President Clinton and Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

The beleaguered leader of Bosnia's Muslim-led government wants a peace plan that he rejected in Geneva last week modified, so Muslims can have secure access to a port on the Adriatic Sea, now controlled by Croats.

Izetbegovic is also seeking another step to get a better deal: moving the talks to New York so the Security Council can provide more direct guidance to international mediators Thorvald Stoltenberg and Lord Owen.

The negotiations among Bosnia's Muslims, Serbs and Croats broke down last week when Serbs and Croats refused to give the Muslims 4 percent more land.

Izetbegovic believes that land is necessary to make the shrunken territory his government controls economically viable.

Bosnian Serbs began grabbing territory after Bosnia's majority Muslims and Serbs voted to secede from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia last year.

In a partition plan proposed during the talks, Bosnian Muslims, who comprised 43 percent of the prewar population, were to get 31 percent of the divided country, Serbs 52 percent and Croats 17 percent.

Izetbegovic blamed mediator Thorvald Stoltenberg for not defending principles set out in the U.N. Charter and Security Council resolutions and for rewarding ethnic cleansing, in which one side ousts people belonging to another faction from their land.

Human rights monitors say Bosnian Serbs have used ethnic cleansing the most during the war.

"The Security Council should ask Mr. Stoltenberg to explain this," Izetbegovic told the member nations, according to text released afterward.

He also asked the council to a deadline for removing Serb heavy artillery besieging Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, and to a threat of air strikes, which never been launched.

Speaking to reporters, Bosnian president declared readiness to resume the talks unconditionally.
