Episcopal priests conduct exorcism

DALLAS (AP) — An exorcism was performed at the Episcopal Diocese of Dallas' headquarters after a series of illnesses started inflicting staff and their families, church officials say.
The exorcism from "all evil spirits" took place Sept. 14 in the form of a blessing of a building, officials say.
Bishop James M. Stanton said he did not dismiss the possibility that the forces of evil might be at work after several people became ill, including back injuries, asthmatic bronchitis and blood clots in the lungs.
The bishop and six other priests and staff members conducted a 45-minute rite that dates to the early Christian church and is permitted under a rubric, or directive, found in the Episcopal Church's "The Book of Occasional Services."
The commission is new, but no predecessor agency has issued an order like Wednesday's, he said.
The order involving Gibraltar Chemical Resources Inc., 10 miles northeast of Tyler in Winona, can't exceed 90 days, Ramirez said. But he said it could be renewed if the company didn't certify that they have correct procedures to properly manage their waste.
The commission also is requiring the company to hire an independent environmental consultant — with approval of the agency's executive director — as an on-site monitor, he said.
Another such consultant must be retained to perform a long-term environmental audit, Ramirez said. He said approval and discussion of the audit will involve Winona residents.

Agency closes waste facility

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' environmental agency on Wednesday ordered a hazardous waste disposal facility near Tyler to stop taking waste until it can certify it's using proper procedures. Officials say it's an unprecedented action.
"This is historic," said Ken Ramirez, deputy executive director of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. "It's significant because it assures that the correct procedures will be utilized and gives the executive director the authority to keep the facility closed until we know that's true."

Infant falls into fish tank, drowns

AMARILLO (AP) — A 10-month-old boy crawled into a fish tank and drowned at his home, where his mother operates a day care center, officials say.
Garrett McDuffee's drowning Wednesday was an accident, police said.
Jacquelynn McDuffee was in the backyard with other children when the boy, who was just learning to crawl, fell into the fish tank on a bedroom floor. Mrs. McDuffee found him floating in about 4 inches of water, police said.
Garrett died at 5:30 p.m. at Northwest Texas Hospital.
