Aggies

After an exchange of punts, A&M's running game went into high gear. Junior Rodney Thomas capped off a 10 play, 69 yard drive with a nine yard touchdown run. Thomas finished the game with 82 yards on 21 carries.
Cougar punter Terry George then helped the Aggies establish 17-0 halftime lead by shanking an 18-yard punt to put the ball at the Houston 48-yard line. Pullig then found Matthews open twice to put Terry Venetoulis in position for a 45-yard field goal.
Houston started its first drive of the game in the third quarter and reached the A&M 12-yard line before Trace Kraft kicked a 40-yard field goal.

enthusiasm.
"He was very excited about being out there," Slocum said. "He was grinning after every play. It's a little unusual to see a running back that, every time he gets off the ground, he's grinning from ear to ear."
Slocum said he tried insure equal playing time among the three players against Houston.
"I noticed that Greg and Rodney were pretty close (rushing) and I wanted to get Leeland in the game," Slocum said. "I was conscious that Leland had not played at all in the beginning of the game."
Hill said the shared playing

Last season in the Astrodome, a 38-30 victory in which A&M posted no sacks, Klingler lit up the stat sheet with 488 yards.
"We got more pressure than last year," A&M head coach R.C. Slocum said.
"I don't know why, but the times we got the most pressure on them was when they went to a four wide receiver formation."
The Cougars have switched from the run and shoot to a three-receiver set. It would not have mattered if Houston played the split T - this team is on a roll.
"Our front four was getting so much pressure on him, he was just running around and throwing (the ball) away," junior cornerback Ray Mickens said. "We didn't get too much action back there.

"Anyway, Houston's receivers don't run routes, they just run to get open. It makes it easy for us."
To prove Mickens' point, check out the numbers that last year's leading receiver in the NCAA posted: two catches for nine yards.
Cougars senior Sherman Smith and the rest of his mates were blanketed for most of the afternoon by Mickens and senior cornerback Aaron Glenn.
Klingler said he was im-time will cause no tension.

"We just have deep friendships," he said. "After every touchdown, we ran and hugged each other."
Slocum said the combination of each player's talents completes the Aggies' successful running attack which, with the addition of fullback Cliff Groce, gained 313 yards rushing.
"I was pleased with all of our running backs," Slocum said. "The interesting thing is that all three of those guys are different style runners."
"Look at the reckless running of Rodney who is running over people and knocking people back; Greg kind of glides and really has speed. Then (there's) a guy like Leeland (who) may be the most dangerous of the group."

A suddenly rejuvenated running game went into a tailspin.

All four of the Cougars' running backs combined for 112 yards rushing while A&M junior running back Greg Hill had 128 yards by himself.
"We could have won the game even if our offense hadn't scored," junior defensive end Sam Adams said. "We just would have kept going out there and playing good defense and kept them out of the end zone."
And let that be a message to the rest of the Southwest Conference. Getting a touchdown will have to be done the old-fashioned way against the A&M defense.
A team will have to get lucky.
