Lady linksters host tournament this weekend

By Jose de Jesus Ortiz

THE BATTALION

The Texas A&M women's golf team will have its hands full this weekend when they host the inaugural Texas A&M Bookstore/Welsh Memorial Golf tournament at Pebble Creek Country Club in College Station.

Lady Aggie head coach Jeanne Sutherland said she expects 16 th ranked Florida International, 24th-ranked Kansas and 25th-ranked Ohio State to be the favorites in the team portion of the tournament, but she thinks the Lady Aggies should not be counted out.

"I think they (A&M) feel comfortable and know they can play the Pebble Creek course well," she said.

"And we have a good chance of winning the tournament."

Sutherland said that the Lady Aggies will need good performances from sophomore Kristina Edfors and senior Terri Clapton to have a chance at the title.

Florida International's senior All-American Moira Dunn and Kansas' senior All-American Holly Reynolds will give Edfors the stiffest competition, Sutherland said.

Because of Edfors' third place showing in the Tiger/Tide tournament last week, Sutherland said she expects the Kungsbacka, Sweden native to be a solid contributor in the tournament for the Lady Aggies.

"They (Clapton and Dunn) are more experienced players and they have better credentials than Kristina," Sutherland said.

"But Kristina plays better each day and she could match up with them. I think she just wants to play her best."

Senior Julie Chapman will be the Lady Aggies number three golfer and redshirt sophomore Stacy Larkin will play the number four spot.

Senior Jennifer Murray, who recently broke into the lineup, rounds out the lineup as she will play number five position.

At the end of each day, every team will submit the scores of its top four finishers and the winner will be decided after the three day, 54 hole tournament is over.

Atlanta's Maddux voted NL Cy young winner

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Greg Maddux won his second straight Cy Young Award on Wednesday, joining Sandy Koufax as the only National League pitchers to win it in successive seasons.

Maddux was 20-10 with a major league-leading 2.36 ERA in his first season for the Atlanta Braves, and became the first pitcher to win the award in consecutive years with different teams. He went 20-10 with a 2.18 ERA in 1992 for the Chicago Cubs, then signed the Braves' five-year, $28 million free-agent contract.

Maddux got 22 of the 28 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. He easily outdistanced San Francisco Giants' Bill Swift and John Burkett, and Braves teammate Tom Glavine, who all won more games than Maddux but had higher ERAs.

No pitcher was named on all 28 ballots. Jack McDowell won the AL's Cy Young winner Tuesday and was the only pitcher listed on every ballot.

Koufax won the award in 1965-66, when only one Cy Young was presented. Beginning in 1967, a winner in each league was selected. Since then, Roger Clemens in 1986-87, Jim Palmer and Denny McLain have been repeat winners in the AL.

The only other pitcher to win the award for different teams was Gaylord Perry — in 1972 with the Cleveland Indians and 1978 with the San Diego Padres.

Maddux, 27, is the top winner in the majors with 107 victories in the last six seasons. He also won three straight Gold Gloves and is one of the best-hitting pitchers in baseball.

tournament bid, or that A&M is an easy opponent to defeat.

"I don't think the loss is going to hurt us," Corbelli said. "I'd rather play Texas every match."

"I think we played them better this time than last time," the first year head coach said, referring to Texas' 15-7, 15-12, 15-5 win on September 15.

"I still don't think that Texas thinks we're easy to beat, but we obviously didn't give them much the last hour and a half."

A&M's next game is this at the University of Texas at San Antonio this Sunday. The Lady Aggies will not play at home again until the regular season finale against Sam Houston State on November 27.

Crowd

successive close calls went against the Lady Aggies and when Texas head coach Mick Haley was complaining to the officials about the behavior of A&M's yell leaders.

Senior yell leader Mark Rollins explained that Haley was concerned with the yell leaders' violation of a new conference rule.

"(Haley) complained that we were supposed to stay on our own side when Texas was serving," Rollins said. "In every other match this season, that has never been a problem. Texas is the first team to complain about that."

Despite his complaint to the officials, Haley said he was very impressed with the size and volume of the crowd.

"That kind of crowd is almost like some techniques used in brainwashing," Haley said.

"All that noise mesmerizes you, and you want to turn it off but instead you turn off. The pros are used to that sort of thing but it's harder at this level."

Corbelli said she thought that although some calls were controversial, it was the team was simply outplayed.

"Maybe there were times when a player or two would get frustrated, and a coach would complain about a call and that can get contagious," Corbelli said. "However we played them better than we did the first time in Austin, and I think Texas thinks we are not an easy team to beat."

Former Cougar Klingler having rough time

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Ohio — David Klingler has had more injuries than touchdown passes in his NFL career, a statistic that's got his head coach concerned.

Klingler will miss a second consecutive game Sunday for the winless Cincinnati Bengals. A sore back interfered with his throwing in practice Monday and prompted coach Dave Shula to name Jay Schroeder as his starter against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

It's just one more frustration for a young quarterback who's having a hard time surviving let alone succeeding.

"There's a lot of standing around and watching. It gets old," Klingler said. "I want to be playing."

The Bengals, a team desperately needing defensive players and offensive linemen, made a stunning choice by drafting Klingler in the first round last year out of Houston. They said he was their quarterback of the future.

Klingler was knocked out of two of the four games he started last season and missed the final game because of injury. This year, he's missed two starts and had to leave two other games because of injury.

Everyone is wondering how long he'll last behind the Bengals' weak offensive line, which has allowed 26 sacks in seven games.

"That's a concern, no question," Shula said. "The thing I don't want to happen to him is what we've seen happen to some other young quarterbacks."

Shula doesn't want him to get so beat up that his career is jeopardized and his development stunted. So far, Klingler has shown little progress in leading the Bengals, but that's more the fault of the front office that put him in a bad situation.

"You can't say right now that he's had a real square deal, with the people around him and the situation we're in," Shula said.

The Bengals, at 0-7 the NFL's only winless team, are rebuilding. They have the most inexperienced roster in the league and one of the worst offensive lines.

The quarterback — whether it's been Boomer Esiason, Klingler or Schroeder — gets little time to throw. The running game is ineffective, and the receiving corps inexperienced.

As a result, Klingler has spent nearly as much time on the mend as on the field. He played roughly 13 quarters last season and missed seven because of a slight concussion, a bruised hip and a bruised thigh.

This year, he's been knocked out of games by a concussion, a strained back and a bruised back. He has started nine games overall and has five touchdown passes.

He spoke in a quiet voice Monday after getting treatment for his sore back.

"It's frustrating because you want to be 100 percent," Klingler said. "You want to be playing, and you're just not happy. All I can do is take it day by day."

Schroeder, who has seen Klingler take some nasty hits, can imagine his frustration over the injuries.

"It's probably the first time it's happened in his life," Schroeder said. "It's tough to deal with."
