Stunt driver killed after miscalculation in collision

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — A Phoenix stunt driver was killed Saturday night when a miscalculation in a planned midair collision sheared off the top of his car during a thrill show at the Alamodome.

Randy Hill, 49, died instantly when his car was struck by a car driven by daredevil Spanky Spangler.

Hill's wife and 3-year-old son were attending the show and witnessed the tragedy, organizers said.

The two cars were supposed to meet head-on at 50 mph, but a miscalculation some sort caused the fatality, organizers said.

Spangler, also of Phoenix, was not hurt in the wreck, show organizers said.

Organizers said Hill had retired from stunt driving eight years ago and only recently decided to do Saturday's stunt. Saturday was the second day of the two-day San Antonio Thrill Show. The rest of the show was canceled after the accident.

Spectators were stunned by the tragedy.

A hush fell over the crowd immediately after the accident, spectator Elsa Quevas said.

"The top car hit the bottom car's top, sending the roof flying off," Quevas said. "The car's cage was cut in half. We were all hoping that the guy was going to pop out of the car. My kids thought it was just a trick." going after the crash, Arnold Sandoval said.

Hill and Spangler had twice performed the midair stunt in the Houston Astrodome in the 1980s.

"This is a very, very sad moment. We lost one of our friends tonight," said Gary Becker, president of PACE Motorsports.

Becker said it was only the second fatality in PACE's 26 years in the car-show business.

Famous 3-year-old burns down house

The Associated Press

LAND O'LAKES, Fla. — When 3-year-old Mikey Sproul took his father's car for a joyride last month and explained "I go zoom," the act grabbed national attention and even became fodder for late-night show monologue jokes.

But nobody's laughing now. Mikey torched his bedroom curtains with a cigarette lighter and burned down his family's home, authorities said.

"The wood burned," Mikey said as investigators picked through the ashes of Thursday night's blaze. "Now I have no more house."

As with his joyride, Mikey escaped unharmed. He was brought out of the burning house by his father, 29-year-old Mike Sproul, who suffered second- and third-degree burns to his back, arms and hands.

The boy's mother, Paula Sproul, 32, wasn't home at the time.

Florida's Department of Health and Rehabilitative

Services put Mikey into protective care Friday after receiving a complaint alleging "a lack of supervision" over the boy, said spokeswoman Elaine Fulton-Jones.

Neighbors, who describe the toddler as a smart child and "a handful," said the Sprouls moved into the house shortly before Christmas last year after their mobile home burned down. Authorities said they may take another look at the earlier fire.

Mikey, who will be 4 next month, became famous Oct. 1 when authorities said he sneaked into his parents' bedroom as they slept, climbed onto their dresser and snatched the car keys.

Authorities are unsure how Mikey drove the family car. At 21/2 feet tall, he can't reach the gas pedal and see over the dashboard at the same time.

Somehow, Florida Highway Patrol officials said, Mikey drove three-tenths of a mile down a busy highway at midnight and didn't hurt anyone, though he hit three parked cars, sideswiped another and ended up in a ditch.

said. The pay is just a technicality, he said, which covers the use of state vehicles and worker's compensation.

But, Torres gives his pay back to the EMS because he only wants to volunteer there.

He likes just helping Aggies, he said.

Williams said any student who has to go to school full-time and work faces added stress.

"Stress kind of builds up and they aren't doing anything to relieve it," he said.

Students should make time to relax, to do something for themselves, even if it is only a few minutes a day, he said.

Student Counseling Services encourages students to plan their activities and provides sample schedules help budget their time.

In some instances, students can use Beutel Health Center's biofeedback machine to learn how to relax, he said.

"You can tell when you are relaxing because of a change in temperature," he said. "Eventually, you will be able to do that without the machine."

The biofeedback machine is available to students 24 hours a day, but students must visit the counseling service before using it.

The athletes and boosters acted on their own with no involvement by the University, A&M officials said.

In the report, the University found the athletes had received $27,800 from January 1990 and August 1992. Of that amount, $17,855 was unearned.

Texas A&M aggressively and thoroughly investigated the charges and took the appropriate steps to correct the problems, the report said.

Several athletes were suspended, including A&M's top rusher for 1992, Greg Hill, who sat out for five games, as a result.
