Cross country finishes strong
 Texas A&M's men's and women's cross country teams ended the season at the NCAA District IV Championships. The men in 10th place while the women finished in eighth.

Hoops squads ink recruits
 The Texas A&M men's team has raised its guard with the signing of Chris Oney, a 6-foot-3 guard from Tallulah, La. and Quilton James, a 6-foot-5 guard from Matteson, Ill. to national letters-of-intent.

A&M head coach Tony Barone said the signings were just what the doctor ordered. "We like what we have done there," Barone said.

The Lady Aggies signed Carey Owens, a 5-foot-8 shooting guard from Corpus Christi King and Kim Linder, a 6-foot post/forward from Amarillo High School.

The first day high school players could sign letters-of-intent was Thursday, Nov. 11.

Ranger's Rodriguez captures Gold Glove

The Associated Press

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees caught up with George Scott for the most Gold Gloves by an American League first baseman, winning for the eighth time in awards announced Monday.

Texas Rangers catcher Ivan Rodriguez won his second consecutive Gold Glove, becoming one of the youngest players in history to capture the award twice.

Chicago third baseman Robin Ventura filled out this year's team.

The National League winners will be announced Tuesday. The Gold Gloves are presented by Rawlings to the best fielders in baseball as chosen in a vote by major league managers and coaches late in the regular season.

Rawlings began the Gold Gloves in 1957 with a combined team.

highs and high schools now," Metcalf said. "Central Texas and East Texas are all my territory now for speaking."

Although basketball is behind him now, Metcalf nevertheless is still remembered by his peers for his contributions to the game.

John Thornton, A&M's Assistant Athletic Director, who played under Metcalf for two years, and coached with him for 10 more, said he believes Metcalf was a big reason why college basketball became a success in Texas.

"The most amazing thing about Shelby is that he compiled all those records and accomplishments when basketball was just an afterthought of football season around here," Thornton said. "Not only did he achieve recognition for A&M in basketball, but also for the state of Texas and the entire southwest region as well."

With basketball season rapidly approaching, Metcalf took time to reflect back on his memories, and look forward to the Aggies chances this season.

"The best team I ever coached was the 1980 team that lost to Louisville in the Sweet 16 round of the (NCAA) tournament the year Louisville won it all," Metcalf said. "I agree with most that this year Texas certainly has the talent to win (the conference), but A&M looks good."

"They have a lot of people coming back, and they had a very good recruiting season."

All good things must come to an end however, and Metcalf will retire from Texas A&M on January 31, 1994, concluding a 35-year career on campus. Thornton said he believes Metcalf has been successful his entire life because of a special mix of attributes.

"He mixes his knowledge of people with a sense of intense competition," Thornton said. "He has such great resources from stories and from his own personality. He is a rare speaker who can relate to both players and audiences all over the country."

they're no good. West Virginia has to keep winning."

And, why is it so difficult for WVU to obtain that status?

Possibly, because of the state their school is located in and named after.

The state of West Virginia is not recognized as the home of the athletically-inclined, intellectually-gifted.

Instead, a slightly unappreciating picture of the state which is unavoidably associated with the university, has been painted: Dilapidated kitchen appliances decorated front porches, status is dependent on the shade of your neck or how high your traps sit off the ground, bull-dog pitching contests are a favorite and brothers make their sisters.

One argument is that the Mountaineers had an easy schedule this season consisting of teams such as Maryland (1-9), Pittsburgh (2-8) and Temple (1-9).

So West Virginia has played the nation's most challenging teams. With a few exceptions, the Aggies have either. That makes the Mountaineers no less talented because of it.

There's one more issue that some people have not considered while complaining A&M's possible absence from the January 1 game.

The Aggies have not officially clinched the berth.

Those who are moaning and groaning over who the Aggies should or should not play, first, need to pray for the NCAA does not void their deathly blow on A&M. Secondly, if A&M does go to Dallas, people should recognize playing West Virginia compared to Notre Dame, Florida State — may present a chance for the Aggies to finally win a Cotton Bowl instead of just visiting.
