Funds

Several student leaders expressed outrage about the incident. Ben Dale, Student Senate academic affairs chairman, said guilty parties should be punished.

"If this is true, I think guilty parties should be held accountable for their actions," Dale said. "If the situations were reversed and Student Government did something like this, our funding would be cut off and would be removed from our positions and be punished."

Student Body President Brian Walker said he didn't agree with actions of the individuals involved.

"Aggies don't lie, cheat or steal," Walker said. "If someone changed vouchers to reflect the purchase of something that was not purchased, no, I cannot endorse that."

Chris Thompson, RHA president, said University officials should adhere to the rules.

"Since the reputation of our school is at stake in situations like this, I think the regents should try to follow the same rules students follow," Thompson said. "If they used state funds to pay for alcohol, I think parents would not be happy knowing their taxes were going to buy booze for regents."

Courtney Joyner, Fish Camp director, said this sends out a message of the University following "double standards."

"As students, we are told not to cheat in class and to always follow the rules," Joyner said. "If this is true, whoever is responsible for changing the vouchers obviously doesn't know how to follow the rules. I did nothing more than cheat the University. I think they need to re-evaluate the message they're sending."

Gang Violence

Several members of the community have responded to the crime rate by establishing the Citizens Crime Commission, a local organization that looks for solutions to crime.

Members of the commission meet periodically to help businesses, schools and law-enforcement agencies look for solutions to prevent gang violence.

McCarver, a member of the commission, describes the solution as searching as a positive group activity.

"The idea of a police substation at the mall was kicked around while, but no definite decision was made," McCarver said. "I can't say if we will implement one in the future."

In an effort to keep trouble at a minimum, security officers work morning and afternoon shifts with four or five officers walking the malls. The officers, who are hired from a security company, also work an evening shift that lasts until 11 p.m. Police officers then patrol the mall and around the parking lot until 7 a.m.

The College Station Police Department and the Sheriff's Department also are available when assistance is necessary, McCarver said.

laid out — not only in the campaign but in the start of his presidency, Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said.

Clinton supports a crime bill that includes more police on the streets, boot camps for young offenders and a ban on semiautomatic weapons.

Faculty/Staff:

Consider yourself invited to become a Rec Sports Member.

Was one of your New Year's resolutions to start exercising? We invite you to make good on that promise to yourself. Faculty/staff and spouses are eligible to purchase a membership. Faculty/staff and spouses may participate in intramurals, receive a reduced rate on trips and clinics offered by TAMU Outdoors, and also count at the Penberthy Golf Range (due to open Feb. 10) with a rec membership. It also gains you access to the Rec Building and the DeWare Field House and weightroom for informal recreation. Rec memberships are $35/two semesters (spring and summer) or $20/semester. Visa, MasterCard and Discover welcome. All memberships purchased expire Aug. 28, 1994. Locker rentals also available for $14/two semesters or $8/semester with rec membership. If you have any questions, please call 845-7826 or stop in and visit us at 159 Read Building, located beneath the east stands of Kyle Field.
