"It has made her more intense."

Despite the attention that comes with success, Kirkland has delivered determined efforts, staying low-key and humble about her abilities on and off the track.

"I don't think anyone needs to talk," she said. "You can talk all day, but you have to follow through."

"I learned a lot from Rosa Baker (top lady Aggie hurdler in '92). She taught me to go out there and do it."

Kirkland said she doesn't want to stop there either.

She said she is not content at this stage in her running, knowing that she has more to prove and that other runners will be shooting for her.

Throughout her career, Kirkland has received a great deal of support from her family whom she considers to be her closest friends.

"My family is my role models and best friends," Kirkland said. "I sometimes call my mom to get words of motivation and she is always checking up on me."

Kirkland explains that her family has remained especially close over the years with the due to the considerable moving that they have gone through with her father in the military.

Off the track, Kirkland is described by friends as one who is fun to be with and wants to share with others.

"She can be wild and crazy and is out going," said Cami Williams, lady Aggie basketball player.

Kirkland, a general studies major, says that she is different off track in that she likes to have and will not hesitate to meet new people. She says, however, that she does not have much time to socialize due to the time classes, practices and study halls consumes.

Kirkland does spend her time on the track, maybe to the dismay of her future opponents.

Whatever the case she is going to make every effort to as she "to earn her scholarship."

After that what will she accomplish? Her reply will probably be the same one she said her mother.

"In 1996, I want to go to the Olympics," Kirkland said. "The what I been saying since elementary school."

those oversized helmets to the cheers of their teammates and the roar of 80,000 rabid fans. What an adrenaline rush that must be.

I say Texas A&M should alter Commencement to follow this format.

After finals, the seniors will be broken down by college, and on a given day, they get to run out in cap and gown, one by one, from the home locker room onto Kyle Field.

Friends and family will fill the stands and wave their Twelfth Man towels.

The University will pay school children $5 a pop to fill the rest of the seats and scream their heads off.

Dave South will take care of the PA announcements.

Fast forward to May, 1996, with South's voice echoing through Kyle Field. "And now, in his fourth year from Houston, sporting a 3.99 GPA (it's a dream, all right?), 6-foot, 7-inches, Nick "No-Jump" Georgandis!!!!"

TRASH-TALKING AND VERBAL PSYCHOLOGY:

You've watched the NFL Films and the Hidden NBA tapes. Those guys know the best insults and the best cliches I have ever heard.

Maybe yelling at people just makes them perform better.

In the future, we could see doctors gathering their staffs around them in a makeshift huddle, and bellowing, "Let's go in there like a pack of wild dogs!"

Heck, even us college kids can get in on the act.

When your physics professor comes around to give you your one question (with 37 sub-parts) mid-term, jump up, grab him by the collar, and scream, "Let's rock, baby!!"

INSTANT REPLAY:

A dazzling play is always forever immortalized on video tape.

Plenty of times, I have accidentally done cool things that, when related later to friends, have always had something lost in transition.

So have a video camera follow you around all day, and all those memorable moments can be forever captured.

You could finish your income tax form on April 14, having concluded that the IRS owes you $3.3 million, point at the camera, and scream, "I'm going to Disneyland!"

Or watch over and over as Drew Diener-controlled Emmitt Smith rushes for 663 yards on seven carries in a spirited game of John Madden Football. Hours of family fun and a lifetime of memories await!

MAKING LAME EXCUSES FOR BAD PERFORMANCES (and being believed):

Players and coaches do the sort of thing all the time, so why not us?

The prosecutor blows a hot case, and faces the media horde with, "Time and time again, my defense came, unmoored, right at my client. Without the judge's protection, we never stood a chance."

When I call home after making a 16 on my first statistics test, I tell my parents, "I was forced to study with this punk, this new guy who looks like he should be selling insurance."

"Anyway, he wanted to see the problem one way, I disagreed, he ran it anyway and we blew the whole test."

"I had to go over and punch him in front of the whole stadium. I mean the whole class to make him see it my way."
