Palestinians step closer to self-rule in Gaza, West Bank

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton hailed as "another big milestone" moves by Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization to implement their agreement for Palestinian self-rule on the West Bank and in Gaza.

But while Clinton suggested Wednesday that a total accord had been worked out, Israel Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said in Cairo that only "five or six of the most complicated issues" involved had been settled with PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

These issues dealt primarily with security. Left unresolved was the size of Jericho, the West Bank town to be turned over to the Palestinians for self-rule, economic issues and a transfer of authority from Israel to the Palestinians, said an official, who acknowledged that Clinton's statement was overly-broad.

The negotiations in Cairo were designed to implement the accord signed last September at the White House by Peres and top Arafat adviser Mahmoud Abbas.

Clinton's words drew applause from members of the World Jewish Congress with whom he met in a government office building near the White House.

"Another big milestone has been achieved today," he told them.

Egypt, which signed a peace treaty with Israel in 1979, acted as a mediator to try to bring the two sides together.

Sarajevans hope NATO threats cease fighting

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — After 22 months of death and shelling, Sarajevans watched a new cease-fire take hold Thursday and this time permitted themselves the rarest of luxuries: hope that NATO threats of air strikes finally silenced the guns of the city's Serb besiegers.

Children came out of shell-scarred buildings behind a new U.N. monitoring post on the front line to play on see-saws unused for two summers. An old man swept shattered bricks and glass from a parking lot. Curious and happy faces poked from windows.

"This is peace!" yelled 12-year-old Ajla Foco, a big smile across her face. "This is peace! I'm so happy."

In Geneva, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic threatened a walkout and denounced NATO. He demanded a public investigation of a mortar shelling Saturday that killed 68 people in central Sarajevo and prompted the threat of NATO intervention.

While suspicion has fallen on the Serbs, Karadzic claims it was a setup by Bosnia's Muslim-led government to kill its own people, blame the Serbs and win international sympathy.

Karadzic's generals warned they would hold foreign aid workers hostage if NATO followed through on its demand for the Serbs to withdraw heavy weapons from around Sarajevo by Feb. 20 or face air strikes.

The Serb generals cooperated with U.N. soldiers to put a cease-fire into effect at noon.

French peacekeepers and armored vehicles occupied several key positions in the Bosnian capital to monitor the truce. They also apparently will act as a tripwire for other NATO threats to call in air power to protect U.N. troops or to immediately retaliate for any renewed shelling of the city.

NATO would need a one-time authorization from U.N. Secretary-General Boutros-Ghali or his special envoy to force Yugoslavia to begin attacks.

Russia's government criticized the ultimatum and said it would demand the U.N. Security Council discuss the issue. A senior U.S. official in Washington said no further authorization was needed from the council.

One French tank and six armored cars lined up on the infamous "Sniper Alley" near Brotherhood and Unity Bridge, with anti-air and heavy machine guns pointing toward positions across the Miljacka River. U.N. officials said the soldiers had orders to shoot if fired upon.
