TEEX runs a training school for police and security officers under its Law Enforcement and Security Training branch.

The anthropology department at Texas A&M uses the campus to store artifacts they find on underwater digs so they will not deteriorate.

Helen Dewolf, a graduate assistant in the anthropology department, said they clean and store many different types of artifacts at the campus.

"Specifically, we have many artifacts from the sunken city of Port Royal, Jamaica, which we have been excavating," Dewolf said. "The city sunk in 1692."

In the future, the campus will be getting a new entrance because the old entrance will be destroyed with the joining of I-21 to new Interstate Highway 47. The new entrance will be off of I-47.

Massey said the campus could have a great future, but he is not exactly sure what future plans are for the campus.

"There is a great future for things to grow out there, but there is also a great potential for the main campus of A&M too," Massey said.

Sweethearts

Connie Diez, a worker at the nation's largest retail confectioner Fannie May and Fanny Farmer candies, oversees the production of chocolate-covered marshmallow hearts in Chicago. Valentine's Day is the biggest single day for chocolate sales.

Rare foods fuel passion, sensuality, professors say

The Associated Press

BOSTON - Dim light, soft music, the fragrance of roses and the lascivious lure of - hyena eyes?

Or try snaring your Valentine's Day sweetheart by sleeping (presumably alone) with an orange under your armpit.

Americans are expected to spend about $655 million on candy to mark Valentine's Day this year, according to the National Confectioners Association, but giving chocolates and sending cards are only two techniques from centuries of romantic traditions.

The ancient Romans held fertility festivals, in which women masqueraded as wolves and waited to be whipped by men wearing loin-cloths.

"The men were young and handsome," said University of Massachusetts classics professor Edward Phinney. "The women would go out of their way to be whipped. It was a very cheerful event."

The Romans held their Lupercalia festival every February until 45 A.D., when a pope put a stop to it. Today, during Lenten celebrations in Italy and Greece, young men still chase young women while brandishing whips - made of plastic.

"They probably do it for fun rather than because they know the meaning of it from antiquity," Phinney said.

Ancient Romans also believed the romantic potency of eating popotamus snout and hyena... although food scientist Richard Mudgett said he isn't sure why.

Mudgett, who gives a lecture on "lewd food" in his UMass course called "World Food Habits," says oranges are a more common food associated with romance and sexual pleasure.

To attract a lover, he said, make pin pricks in an orange, then sleep with the orange under your armpit. According to European folklore, the person who eats the orange will fall in love with you.

Oranges also were considered aphrodisiacs in ancient China when the emperor would slice with his favorite concubine and sprinkle orange blossoms their bed, Mudgett said.

Other so-called "lewd foods" include artichokes, bananas and which follow the logic that if a resembles sexual organs, it must spire sexual feelings.

Mudgett said there's no scientific basis for the amorous reputation of these and other fruits and vegetables, though food and romance go hand in hand in Western culture. Friends meet for lunch, court over dinner.

"The two most powerful involve food and sex," said Mudgett. "One's for survival, the other for procreation, but certainly stimulate people to salivate."
