Cat found on ship after three weeks at sea

The Associated Press
MOUNT VERNON, Wash. — The cargo container that arrived from Taiwan had one import too many.
A scrawny, blue-eyed cat traveled about 6,000 miles and spent more than three weeks at sea in a chilly corner of a container shipped to a Mount Vernon warehouse.
The black cat was christened Hanjin for the name of the Korean shipping line painted in huge white letters on the container's side. The cat was found Sunday by Steve Wells, who owns Mobile Merchandisers Inc., when he opened the steel box to unload a shipment of display stands.
"All of a sudden, it was up there staring at me," Wells said. "I said, 'What do we have here?'"
Wells fed the frightened animal a bit of dried doughnut and water. He closed up the container and returned Monday with cat food. Hanjin grabbed a few bites, then stepped further back into the container. Warehouse manager Stickle carefully emptied the container box by box to expose the cat's hiding place.

Veterinarian Gary Johnson, wearing thick welding gloves, carefully plucked the cat Monday from its shredded cardboard at the container's far end.
"Just a baby, aren't you?" Johnson said, cradling his arms. He took the cat to his Highland Animal Clinic where it was given food, water and a hot pad to sleep on.
"She's doing OK so far," said Mary Emmett, a veterinary technician. "I'm surprised she's doing so well. I little thing."
Wells' wife, Darcy, who owns and operates an importing wholesale company, said she may keep Hanjin as an official warehouse cat.
