it's all about."
The Aggies are lead by senior Mark Weaver, currently the 27th-rated player in the nation. Weaver will begin his defense of his Southwest Conference singles crown from last season today against Jose Medrano.

Weaver's overall singles record this season is 22-6, and he recently recorded his 100th career singles match win, to move his all-time record to 102-43, a spectacular 70.4 winning percentage.

Head tennis coach David Kent said Weaver is a vital part to the Aggies' success.

"Mark Weaver is one of the biggest reasons for our success this season," Kent said.

"He sets the tone for the entire team, and he's been marvelous all season."

lege football. Slocum said he thought Ensminger's first day on the field with the players was successful.

"It went probably better than you would have expected it to go the first day," Slocum said. "The players responded well to the challenges."

Ensminger echoed Slocum's sentiments and said he was pleased with the effort turned out by his players.

"They were out there battling and fighting," Ensminger said. "I think they have a chance to pick it up and get better everyday."

Ensminger employs a much different system from the one run by Toledo.

He said that he expects that the players will have some difficulty adjusting but said he is optimistic that they will eventually catch on.

Ensminger said he looks to complement A&M's excellent running game with a more developed passing attack.

Most of the pressure in Ensminger's attack falls on the shoulders of the quarterback who more or less calls and adjusts many of the plays from the line of scrimmage.

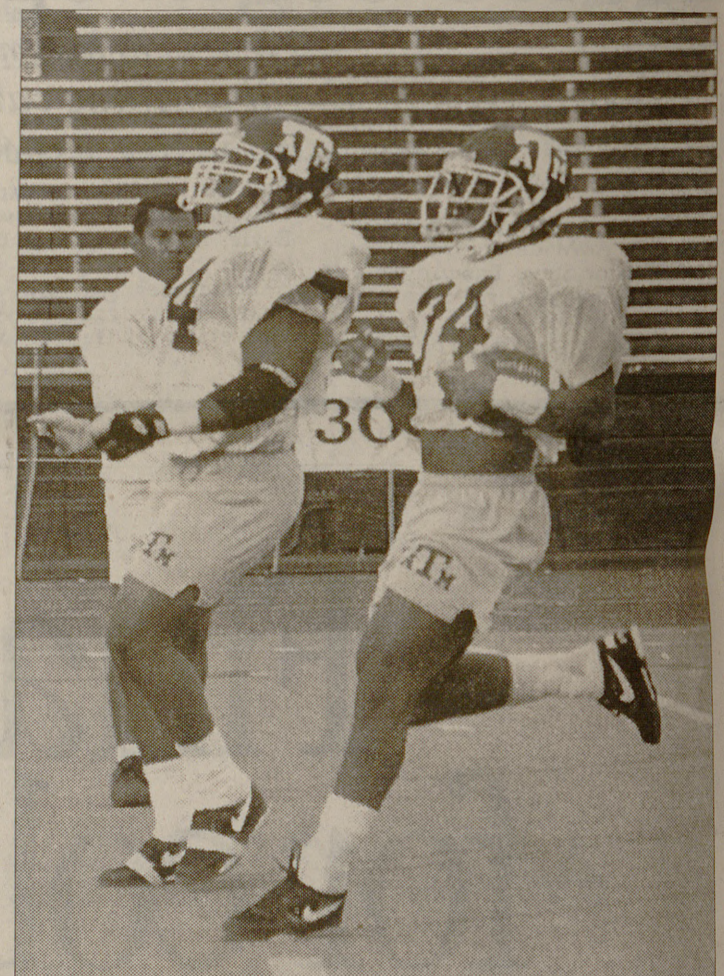

"We don't have to throw it 40 times (per game)," Ensminger said. "But we can be effective when we do throw it because it will make our running game that much better."

On the other side of the ball, Tuberville packs a great deal of enthusiasm and brings a winning tradition to A&M.

The 39-year-old Tuberville served as an assistant coach at the University of Miami for eight seasons where he was part of three national championships.

Tuberville started out as a graduate assistant in 1986 and eventually worked his way up to defensive coordinator, which he was named prior to the 1993 season.

In his one season as defensive coordinator, the Hurricanes ranked fourth in the nation in total defense allowing just 255.8 yards per game, and third in scoring defense yielding a mere 12.5 points per game. Slocum said that Tuberville is an outstanding defense coach and will do a fine job of carrying on the "Wrecking Crew" tradition at A&M.

In addition to his job as coordinator, Tuberville will work with the inside linebackers. While at Miami, Tuberville was the full-time linebackers coach from 1989 to 1992.

Tuberville said that he is excited about becoming a part of the A&M football program and priming the team for an eventual national title.

"We're not going to change a lot of things," Tuberville said. "We're trying to find personnel, guys that can replace the guys that left last year."

To be successful, Tuberville said that aside from developing a solid first team defense, a quality second team is a must.

"I found out one thing from coaching at the University of Miami," Tuberville said. "You don't win the big games with your first team players all the time."

"Most of the time your second team players have to come in and help and not just be fill-ins."

Tuberville and Ensminger will have 15 days of spring drills to work with and familiarize themselves with their new staffs and players before taking the practice field in August to prepare for the 1994 season.
