

Israeli troops stall peace talks after killing 6 Palestinians

The Associated Press

JABALIYA REFUGEE CAMP, Occupied Gaza Strip — Israeli undercover troops killed six senior members of the PLO's military wing Monday in the Gaza Strip, violence that threatened to jeopardize attempts to revive Israel-PLO peace talks.

In a sign of Israeli determination to move forward with Palestinian autonomy, Israeli media reported the army will be ready to pull out of Gaza by April 14.

The shooting left the highest one-day death toll in the occupied lands since the Feb. 25 massacre at a Hebron mosque that killed 30.

The army said the six dead were senior members of the Fatah Hawks, the military wing of Yasser Arafat's mainstream PLO organization. They were still sought by the army despite the nearly 6-month-old peace agreement.

Arafat charged in an interview with The Associated Press in Tunisia that the killings were a deliberate attempt by some elements in the Israeli army to derail the peace process.

Before the shooting, the six were distributing leaflets in the Jabaliya refugee camp criticizing the PLO for trying to return to talks on starting Palestinian self-rule in Gaza and part of the West Bank.

Suddenly, about seven Israeli undercover soldiers in two cars opened fire, killing four men instantly, witnesses said.

Two of the six Palestinians were shot point-blank — one grabbed by the hair and shot in the head and a second killed as he bled on the ground, witnesses said.

While the army reported only one wounded, witnesses said a seventh Palestinian and two bystanders were wounded. Arafat also reported that two Palestinians were killed in the violence.

Fatah called for major confrontations with the army on Tuesday and a three-day mourning strike. "We must make the land beneath the feet of the Israeli soldiers bleed. Fatah trucks with loudspeakers
