Professors ready for Senate election

By Melissa Jacobs
The Battalion

Thirty-three seats in the Texas A&M Faculty Senate will be filled today during the faculty senate elections.

There currently are 94 senators in the Faculty Senate. A college has one senator for every 25 faculty members.

According to the Faculty Senate Constitution, all faculty members are eligible to vote in Faculty Senate elections, even if they are not members of the Faculty Senate.

The terms run for three years, and no senator may serve more than six years in a nine-year period.

Dr. Howard B. Kaplan, caucus leader of the College of Liberal Arts and a distinguished professor of sociology, said the Faculty Senate represents the faculty and makes suggestions to the administration.

"This election is important because it reflects the need of the faculty to participate in matters affecting their own welfare and duty," he said.

"Their participation reflects the willingness of faculty members to take responsibility for the outcomes that affect them."

The Faculty Senate Constitution defines its purpose as the reviewing of all policies dealing with curricula and instruction; academic standards including admissions, graduation and retention; scholarships, honors and other forms of student distinction; and hiring, retention, tenure, promotion and evaluation of academic personnel.

Kaplan said the Faculty Senate is successful in achieving its goals.

"The Faculty Senate is successful to the degree that it makes recommendations that are responded to by the central administration, and so far the administration has been quite responsive and happy with the recommendations," he said.

Results of the Faculty Senate elections will be announced Wednesday or Thursday.

tions." Hall also said the questions surrounding the elections have been answered.

"As far as the controversy and all of the ill feelings are concerned, I hope that was all dissipated tonight," Hall said. "As far as the ruling, it provides that further actions be taken."

Kathy Emerson, a member of the judicial board, said similar problems can be avoided in the future.

"I think we are in a room full of leaders here tonight," Emerson said. "As leaders, we have an ethical responsibility to not always find loopholes. There are a lot of other ways to prove points than to put other people in jeopardy."

Crain said he agreed with Emerson's view because some of the problems have turned personal.

"I never wanted to go to head-to-head combat," Crain said. "My job has been to make sure the election is fair for everyone. I swore to uphold that fairness. I'm bound by the Senate to do my job."

Haraway said he did not want the issue to be seen as a battle between himself and Crain.

"I never thought it was Michael Crain's fault that he has to enforce such a weak body of regulations," Haraway said. "He did the best job he could."

Crain also said he is disappointed by the problems with this year's election.
