Fort Worth unveils designs for new symphony, performing arts hall

The Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Designs for a $60,000 million 2,000-seat downtown performance hall, which is expected to become the new home of five Fort Worth arts groups, finally will be unveiled Wednesday.

The principal users of the hall will be the Fort Worth Symphony, Fort Worth Opera, Fort Worth Ballet, Van Cliburn Foundation and Casa Manana Theater.

The arts groups are excited that they are closing in on securing first-class quarters after years of disappointment.

"We want a home," said Ann Koonsman, executive director of the Fort Worth Symphony Association.

The symphony rehearses at a south Fort Worth facility and performs at Fort Worth/Tarrant County Convention Center's JFK Theater.

The convention center was finished in 1968 with the 3,054-seat JFK Theater as a multiuse auditorium.

The theater has proved to be inadequate acoustically, Ms. Koonsman said.

By the early 1980s, the Fort Worth Symphony Association began lobbying for a new hall with better acoustics and easier access for performing arts groups.

The first proposal was a radical renovation of the city-owned Will Rogers Auditorium, with $20 million of the $30 million cost being raised through a municipal bond issue. The proposal was defeated overwhelmingly at the polls in July 1990.

The new hall will be built with foundation grants and private contributions under the leadership of downtown developer Edward P. Bass. The project was initiated with two large initial gifts, totaling $28 million, from the Sid W. Richardson Foundation and the Burnett-Tandy Foundation.

In addition, Perry R. Bass, Ed Bass' father, donated the city block-sized site.

Recent gifts have brought the fund-raising effort to a total of $10 million, said Patricia Schuts, development director for Performing Arts Fort Worth, the non-profit group in charge of building the hall.

The Van Cliburn Foundation, Fort Worth Opera and Fort Worth Ballet will present all principal subscription-series events at the hall. The 11th Van Cliburn International Piano Competition will be held there in 2001.

Officials of Performing Arts Fort Worth expect at least 1,000 people at the free, afternoon event Wednesday in which the designs will be revealed.

Wednesday's event will feature live entertainment including the "nuns" from Casa Manana's production of the play "Nunsense II" Ballet Folklorico, a Dixieland band, the Jefferson String Quartet from the Youth Orchestra of Greater Fort Worth, members of the Fort Worth Symphony and Sidestreet Circus also will perform.

Indian students can keep long hair, court says

The Associated Press

DALLAS — A federal appeals court has left in place a lower court's injunction allowing Alabama and Coushatta Indian tribal members to follow their religion by wearing long hair in the Big Sandy school district.

The U.S. 5th Circuit Court in New Orleans released its decision Monday to remand the case for reconsideration in light of the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993, which became a law after the case entered the courts.

The act was passed between the date of the district court's order and the oral argument of this case, the judges wrote in their opinion filed last Thursday.

"The RFRA will plainly affect the district court's analysis of ultimate relief in this case," they wrote. "But we, too, cannot ignore the significance of RFRA to a just resolution of this appeal."

About a fourth of the district's 400 students are members of the Alabama-Coushatta tribe. Ten of them filed the lawsuit.

After a federal court ruled in the students' favor, the school district appealed it, saying they need the hair-length policy and other dress codes to prevent disruptions and to maintain an environment conducive to learning.

Telephone calls to the Big Sandy school district went unanswered Monday evening.

Students say long hair means power, wisdom, strength and a connection to the past. Many believe hair should be cut only when mourning the death of a close relative.
