Oilers-Vikings agree in principle to trade Moon

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Warren Moon, the star quarterback who led the Houston Oilers to the playoffs for seven straight years, is heading to the Minnesota Vikings.

Oilers owner Bud Adams said Wednesday the team has reached an agreement in principle to send Moon to Minnesota.

"For all practical purposes, we have a trade, but we have a lot of details to be worked out," Adams said Wednesday. "But I see no problem to keep us from working it out. I think within 72 hours we'll have a deal."

Adams' comments came shortly after a phone conversation with Vikings president Roger Gooden, who also said the deal was near completion.

"As of yesterday, it wasn't that close but right now I have kind of mixed feelings," Moon said. "Everybody knows I wanted to finish my career here but also knowing there's another team that wants me is a challenge."

"You can give your all if you know the fans are behind you."

But his emotions are mixed.

"I'm still going to be calling Houston home but I won't be playing football in the dome any more," he said. "I really didn't want to leave here ... but I do have a team that wants me."

Kosar to go back to Miami as Marino's backup

The Associated Press

DAVIE, Fla. — Bernie Kosar will be back in a Miami uniform this fall.

Ten years after leading the Miami Hurricanes to their first national championship, Kosar signed a two-year, $1.65 million contract Wednesday with the Miami Dolphins. He will be the backup quarterback to Dan Marino.

"It's exciting and an honor for me to come back home and play here," Kosar said at a news conference. "South Florida has always been special in my heart."

Kosar, 30, became an unrestricted free agent after finishing last season as a reserve for the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys. He also reportedly negotiated with Dallas, Kansas City and Washington, and may have passed up a chance to start for the Redskins.

"I had some other options over the last week or so," Kosar said. "I had opportunities to play more regularly with other teams. But I didn't really think the teams were as talented as the Miami Dolphins."

For the nine-year veteran, sitting on the bench with a Super Bowl contender has more appeal than playing for a poor team.

"What I like most about the NFL is the January games," Kosar said.

Arena

A staunch supporter of the new facility has been head men's basketball coach Tony Barone. Barone has previously stated improved facilities as one of his eight steps in his "Blueprint for Success" for the men's basketball program.

Hickey said the limited amount of space available for teams to practice is another strong argument for the new arena.

"There were no practice facilities for all of us (both basketball squads and the volleyball team)," Hickey said.

"We took turns with the men's team having practice late at night. We need more floor space."

Last week, the University made a presentation of the plans for the center to the Building Committee of the Coordinating Board. The proposal was approved for further consideration, and the committee will report to the full Coordinating Board sometime later this month.

If the Coordinating Board agrees to the proposal, the university's final approval will be voted on in July.

Groff also stated the impending conference merger with the Big Eight as a reason for the urgency of a new facility.

"We pride ourselves on our facilities, and G. Rollie is one of the few facilities that is not first class," Groff said.

"Some of the schools in the Big Eight have facilities with seating between 12,000 and 15,000. With this facility, we're in the top 10 percent of the country (in quality)."

"We pride ourselves on our facilities, and this is highly desirable."

Olajuwon MVP says Minnesota's Brown

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — After being in the trenches on successive nights with two of the top candidates for the NBA's MVP award, Minnesota center Mike Brown is prepared to cast his ballot.

Is it San Antonio's David Robinson or Houston's Hakeem Olajuwon?

"Hakeem is the best center in the league, and he's been the best the last five or six years," Brown said.

"David is having an MVP season by the numbers but Hakeem has played that way for years. He was my MVP last year."

Olajuwon scored 42 points including 13 in the final 4-07 to keep the Timberwolves from a late rally on Tuesday night for a 98-89 victory.

On Monday night, Brown and the Timberwolves lost to the Spurs 101-89. Robinson scored 29 points and got 11 rebounds.

Both players left vivid impressions on the Timberwolves with Olajuwon taking the edge.

Houston from the old National League West.

The Reds' presence does make me feel a little better, because the Reds-Astros series over the past three seasons has escalated into a near warlike state.

It all started back in 1991, in the very first weekend of the season. Rob Dibble, always known for his peaceful demeanor on the field, had just given up a run-scoring single to Astros' pitcher Pete Harnisch.

At this point, Dibble, unable to control his frustration, blew off some steam by throwing his next pitch behind the head of the Astros' next batter, shortstop Eric Yelding.

Despite his slight of build, Yelding wasted no time charging the monstrous Dibble, first pegging Dibble with his batting helmet, then jumping into the melee as both benches cleared.

Later in the year, former Astro and at the time current Red Billy Doran played peacemaker between Yelding and Dibble. Or so he thought.

A year later, the two teams were at it again, with Dibble as the primary instigator one more time. This time however, Dibble met his match in the brawl in Astros' first base coach Ed Ott, he of 10 knee surgeries. Ott grabbed Dibble in a choke hold, and was later quoted saying he watched Dibble turn red, then blue, then purple before letting him loose.

That's the kind of talk old-time baseball fans love. It hearkens back to a time when two cities and two teams just didn't want to beat each other up, they wanted to beat each other up, and send the losers home with their tails between their legs.

The Astros used to have that kind of wonderful relationship with the Giants, Braves and Dodgers.

With the Giants, it was mainly the apathy felt by the city of Houston towards Will Clark (for having the nerve to light Nolan Ryan up), and towards former Giants manager Roger Craig, who taught Mike Scott the split-finger fastball, and then constantly accused him of scuffing the ball.

With the Braves it was the hatred of the fact that the Braves perennial cellar dwellers were suddenly very, very good. Once they got hot, it seemed they constantly beat the Astros senseless.

With the Dodgers, it was always special just because they were the Dodgers. The Dodgers had dominated the division during the 1980's, and always seemed to have the Astros' number. Plus, Los Angeles was the home of the Houston Rockets nemesis in the 1980's, the Lakers. I get chills remembering summer nights in Houston when the Astrodome would rock to chants of "Beat L.A.! Beat L.A.!"

Rivalries are not born overnight, except in the case of an extraordinary occurrence. It will take some time for the Houston fans to familiarize themselves with the new teams' heroes and villains, now that we'll be seeing them 13 times a year each. But still, I just cannot envision myself screaming, "Beat Pitts-burg! Beat Pitts-burg!"
