rector of University Relations, said A&M classes were not canceled because of the nearness of finals.

"Canceling classes the week before finals sometimes creates a problem," she said.

Mobley suggested institutions schedule an appropriate memorial as a tribute to Nixon, and several groups around the A&M campus will hold ceremonies honoring the president.

Seven members of the Ross Volunteers honor guard will fire a 21-gun salute at noon Wednesday in front of the Administration Building at the main entrance of campus. A bugler from the Texas Aggie Band will play "Taps" following the salute.

A large-screen television will broadcast Nixon's funeral in Room 292 of the MSC and flags around campus will be flown at half staff throughout the 30-day mourning period.

of up to $1,500 and/or a jail term of up to 180 days.

"It's just like any other criminal charge," he said. "Each case will be examined by the county attorney's office. We are going to find out first if the individuals involved were willing participants. Each case will be different."

Lindholm said the University now is primarily concerned with protecting the needs of the public.

"The whole purpose of this notification is to try to stop this before it gets out of hand," he said. "Hopefully, we will be able to prevent other people from being taken in."

The student who was involved in the scheme said he does not think any participants will be caught.

"You can catch them, but how will you prove anything," he said. Zdziarski said most students get involved in these schemes for the money.

"Money is hard to come by for the college student," Zdziarski said.

The student said he got involved in the scheme just to see what would happen.

"I was talked into it," he said. "I couldn't believe it when I saw how much money the guy who talked to me was making. I took the chance just to see how it would play out."

The amount of money involved in the scheme is overwhelming, the student said.

"In one night, I had lots of money go through my hands," he said. "When it hit here, it was new, so everybody wanted to get in on it."

UPD Director Bob Wiatt said schemes similar to this are not common on college campuses.

"What is more common is a chain letter," Wiatt said. "These kind of things come and go occasionally. This type of case is extremely rare."

UPD is waiting for leads in the case before any further action is taken.

thrown several hundred yards from the plane.

The bodies, wrapped in blankets, initially were placed in four large tents set up near the wreckage.

Dozens of relatives of passengers were in the airport lounge, looking through windows at the distant crash scene, lighted by rescuers' spotlights.

On the passenger list, more than 100 of the names were not Japanese. No breakdown by nationality was available, but most were Chinese names.

The cause of the crash was not immediately clear.

Chang Tai-hsih, the head of the China Airlines branch in Japan, said the right wing of the plane touched the ground just before the crash.

He and others discounted initial reports that the plane had engine trouble in Taipei before its 1,180-mile flight to Nagoya. A Nagoya airport official said the plane had been only 13 minutes late taking off.

An airport police official said the plane's voice recorder has been recovered, which will help investigators learn the cause of the accident.

Japan Broadcasting Corp. quoted a witness as saying the plane hit nose-first near the beginning of the runway and appeared not to have its landing gear down.

Three explosions followed, and the plane burst into flames, it quoted him as saying.

Tornado

The City Council met Tuesday afternoon to discuss damage assessments and coordinate efforts for relief and reconstruction. About 200 residents angry that they were not being allowed to return to their homes jammed into a municipal courtroom.

People with a driver's license showing their home address or a permit obtained at the police station were allowed back into the area. Others were kept out.

"My heart goes out to all of them, but we can't address every one of the 5,000 or 6,000 of those emergencies," McGuire said.

Dozens of people were hurt, but by Tuesday afternoon all had been accounted for in the city of 24,000, City Manager Bill Gaither said.

The twister was part of a system tracked more than 30 miles from the west side of Fort Worth. It also touched down in DeSoto, where the city hall and civic center both suffered severe damage.
