Three ways to beat the high cost of college.

1. The Montgomery GI Bill
2. Student loan repayment
3. Part-time income

The Army Reserve Alternate Training Program is a smart way to pay for college.

First, if you qualify, the Montgomery GI Bill can provide you with up to $6,840 for current college expenses or approved v/tech training.

Second, if you have or obtain a qualified student loan not in default, you may get it paid off at the rate of 15% per year or $500, whichever is greater, up to a maximum of $10,000. Selected military skills can double that maximum.

Third, you can earn part-time money in college, and here's how it works: One summer you take Basic Training, and the next summer you receive skill training at an Army school. You'll earn over $1,500 for Basic and even more for skill training. Then you'll attend monthly meetings at Army Reserve unit near your college, usually one weekend a month plus two weeks a year. You'll be paid over $105 a weekend to start. It's worth thinking about. Give us a call:

Irvin will undergo surgery Tuesday

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Michael Irvin is scheduled to undergo surgery Tuesday to repair his left shoulder and should be ready for the season opener Sept. 4, the team says.

Irvin suffered a subluxation, which team trainers say is a partial dislocation caused by the joint popping out of place then locking back into the socket.

Orthopedic specialist Dr. James Andrews of Birmingham, Ala., will perform the operation in Dallas.

Cowboys orthopedic surgeon Dr. Robert Vandermeer, who will assist with the procedure, said he expects Irvin to be ready for the season opener against Pittsburgh.

"I anticipate he will be ready for the start of the season if we do it now," Vandermeer said.

Vandermeer said Irvin likely won't be allowed to take hits until sometime in August, meaning he'll miss much of the team's training camp. The team's first practice is scheduled for July 15 in Austin.

Irvin's shoulder likely will be immobilized for three weeks, followed by a rehabilitation program, Vandermeer said.

Priority deadline for football tickets draws near

Texas A&M season and individual game football ticket orders must be postmarked by May 31 to meet the priority deadline. Ticket orders will continue to be accepted after that date, but will be filled on a first-come basis after the priority ticket orders are filled.

The Athletic Ticket Office is located inside the lobby of G. Rollie White Coliseum on the campus of Texas A&M University. The phone number is (409) 845-2311 or 1-800-800-7928. Only Visa and Mastercard orders will be accepted over the phone.

The 1994 season will mark the 100th season for Aggie football. It is also the year of A&M's ban from television because of NCAA sanctions. The home opener is Sept. 10 against Oklahoma. Other home games are: Southern Mississippi (Sept. 24), Texas Tech (Oct. 1), Baylor (Oct. 15), Rice (Oct. 22) and Texas Christian (Nov. 19.)

Broderson leaves A&M to pursue writing career

Lance Broderson, a 6-foot-7-inch forward for the Texas A&M basketball team, has withdrawn from Texas A&M to pursue a professional writing career, A&M basketball coach Tony Barone said May 23.

Broderson, who would have been a junior next season, played in all 30 games for the Aggies last season, averaging 4.8 points and 3.1 rebounds per game. As a freshman, he was named to the Southwestern Conference all-newcomer team after averaging 8.8 points and 4.7 rebounds in league play.

Broderson played prep basketball at Waubonsie Valley High School in Naperville, Ill. His family has since moved to Danville, Calif., where he plans to attend a junior college in the San Francisco Bay area.

Edfors places 81st at NCAA Golf Championships

Texas A&M sophomore Kristina Edfors finished her fourth and final round at the NCAA Women's Golf Championships at the Oregon Golf Club in West Linn, Ore. Saturday by shooting an 89. Edfors finished the tournament tied for 81st with a total score of 325.

"Kristina had one of those days where bad shots seemed to multiply themselves," Texas A&M head coach Jeanne Sutherland said. "Just making the NCAA Championships is a great accomplishment for a young player. She can take this experience and build upon it next season."

In her other three rounds, Edfors fired a 75, 81 and 80 respectively.

Edfors, a sophomore economics major from Kungsbacka, Sweden, is the first Lady Aggie golfer to qualify for the NCAA Championship since Fiona Connor qualified in 1987. Connor finished tied for 41st at the University of New Mexico South Course in Albuquerque, N.M.

New phone feature foils prank callers

'Caller ID' function puts name and number on incoming calls

HOUSTON (AP) — The age of "electronic peepholes" kicks off in Houston next week with the introduction of Caller ID that allows customers to track names and numbers on incoming calls.

The service, provided by Southwestern Bell, premieres Wednesday and is the first of its kind in Texas.

Austin is the only other city in Texas with Caller ID, but that service only provides customers with the phone number of the incoming call, not the caller's name.

PROVIDES SECURITY
 "Caller ID is a convenient way for people who want additional security in their telephone service to avoid undesirable calls," said Rick Gamez, a Southwestern Bell general manager.

"It's really an electronic peephole."

Southwestern Bell says it hopes Caller ID service will be available in most metropolitan areas in Texas by early next year.

COST ABOUT $50
 The Caller ID panel can be purchased for about $50. It displays the number and the time and date of the call. With the expanded service, the name of the person or company to whom that number is assigned also appears.

All of the information appears after the first ring, even if the phone remains unanswered.

The panel is a small rectangular box, and can be programmed to display information in Spanish or English.

So far, about 18,500 customers in the Houston area have pre-ordered the caller ID system. Of those, 88 percent also ordered the name ID option.

NUMBERS CAN BE BLOCKED
 However, Southwestern Bell has developed other services to protect callers who wish to remain anonymous.

"The system does not force a caller to leave their number," said Wayne Alexander, vice-president of general management.

Callers can block their numbers from ever being sent to a Caller ID customer by obtaining a phone number blocking option that prevents the caller's number and name from ever being transmitted.

batters. That averages to 1.21 walks an inning. Show me a starting pitcher that hands out nine or 10 walks in a complete game and gets a win.

In Williams' defense, he does have almost as many strike outs (21) as he has walks. On the other hand, every other pitcher on the Astros' staff has quite a bit more strike outs than walks. (The only exception to that is Pete Harnisch, who has gone on the disabled list, because of a partial tear in his bicipital tendon.) And you have to think that a batter facing Williams is just so shocked a pitch is a strike he fails to hit it.

Pitching in Major League Baseball is an exact science. Gone are the days of a strike zone being from the arm pits to the knees. Try maybe the belt to the knees. It has definitely evolved into a hitters game.

Williams' wildly erratic pitching does not work well with this evolution of the game. That's why he gives up so many walks. And the pitches he does get over don't have enough movement or speed on them to be effective. Hence, an ERA of 7.57.

Perhaps Williams' biggest fault is the distraction he brings to the team. Blowing so many saves and leads tends to attract a lot of attention. Press and on-lookers from around the world come to watch and say, "Hey, how big of a lead will Mitch blow this time?"

So far, he hasn't let his "fans" down.

He even has other teams' crowds rooting for him to enter the game. Friday night the crowd in Philadelphia (William's last team) chanted, "We want Mitch! We want Mitch!" Collins gave them their wish and sent Williams in during the bottom of the ninth. They were hoping Williams would turn on his magic and give the Phillies the win. He wasn't in long enough to have that opportunity.

Of the three batters he faced, he walked Jim Eisenreich, hit Mickey Morandini with a pitch, and gave up a line drive that left fielder Luis Gonzalez had to jump to catch.

All in all, though, it is hard to really hate Williams. He seems like a pretty gracious guy. He has said, on more than one occasion, that he knows he is pitching badly and that if he were manager he wouldn't put himself in.

He even offered to buy John Hudek, who has taken Williams' closing job, a new pair of boots, because Hudek's old pair was worn out.

Of course, I know a lot of people who are really nice, but don't know the first thing about pitching.

Williams' day has come. It's time for the Wild Thing to be put out to pasture.

Number of skin cancer cases likely to keep increasing

Sunscreen may not protect 1,600 Texans expected to develop melanoma in 1994

DALLAS (AP) — Melanoma, the deadliest form of skin cancer, is of more concern to doctors than ever before, with the number of cases rising about 4 percent a year since the 1970s.

With more people moving to southern states and evidence that the earth's protective ozone layer is thinning, public health officials worry that the cancer will only get worse. The Dallas Morning News reported in its Saturday editions.

In 1960, one American in 600 was diagnosed with melanoma. By 2000, that number is expected to be one in 75.

This year, the American Cancer Society expects 32,000 new cases, about 1,600 of those in Texas. For all skin cancers in the United States, the numbers are expected to exceed 700,000.

In southern states, about 30 percent of the population is expected to develop skin cancer at some point in their lives.

"It's particularly tragic because it affects young people," said Dallas dermatologist J.B. Howell, who has seen melanoma rates climb during his 50 years in practice.

The newspaper said scientists are constantly working out strategies to protect sun worshippers.

Among recent findings,

Texas researchers have focused attention on sunscreen, suggesting that the lotion might not be the chemical suit of armor that many people believe it to be.

Also, doctors are now emphasizing children's exposure to sunlight as a foreshadowing of their melanoma risks as adults.

To protect the eyes as well as the skin, a San Antonio scientist has come up with a new kind of sunglasses that guard against the potentially harmful effects of visible light as well as ultraviolet light.

"We're exposing ourselves more to sunlight, and we're starting to see the consequences," said Stephen Ullrich of the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston.

Dr. William Jacott, a family practitioner at the University of Minnesota and a board member of the American Medical Association, joined doctors from three other professional associations Friday in issuing their strongest warning yet that children are in great danger from the sun's rays.

The organizations issued a set of guidance called "Save Our Skin" that emphasize keeping children out of the sun and protecting them with an SPF-15 sunscreen when they go outside.

The proposal brought a wide variety of reactions and a great deal of discussion between the senators.

Dr. Karen Kubena, a senator from the College of Agriculture, said she was vehemently opposed to the course.

"I would have a problem with such a course being in the core curriculum," Kubena said.

Dr. Richard Feldman, a senator from the College of Engineering, said he also objected to the committee's report.

"The only solution to this problem (AIDS) is abstinence before marriage," Feldman said.

However, Dr. John Gelderd, chair of the HIV/AIDS subcommittee, said the program is the best way to educate everyone at A&M about AIDS.

"We want to make sure everyone on campus is educated about AIDS," Gelderd said. "There is no resolution our body can pass that will prevent a large percentage of students from engaging in sexual activities."

Dr. Steve Oberhelman, a senator from the College of Liberal Arts, said the program would be a great step for Texas A&M.

"If something like this can prevent the death of just one Texas A&M University student, I am in favor of it," Oberhelman said.
