Arrests

She was also the orientation student assistant chair for Excel and won the Black Graduate Student Association Highest Grade Point Ratio Award. "They were very kind, very giving people," Carreathers said. "I just think they had bad luck. "They were probably in an environment they thought was safe, and it turned out not to be," he said. "I think it was just a random act, and they just happened to be there." Bob Wiatt, director of University Police Department, announced May 25 a $10,000 reward for information pertaining to the murders. UPD created a reward fund in 1988 after a female student was abducted and sexually assaulted. The woman in that case survived and identified her assailant, who is now awaiting execution on death row. Wiatt said the money was set aside to help in any future case in which a particularly heinous crime was committed against an A&M student or faculty member. "We have not used that award since then," he said. "When this happened the other night, we decided to make that award available." Wiatt said the reward had no bearing on the arrests made and has been withdrawn, but the money will be kept available for future cases. Funerals for both students were held Saturday.
