cause enrollment is limited at the Temple campus. Smith said the building is a major step forward in responding to the needs of Texas citizens. Mary Nan West, chair of the Board of Regents, said she thought it was a good deal because Scott & White would finance half of the center.

"It was a unanimous vote and I think that knowledge and the medical world will be enhanced by it," she said. The plans will be presented to the Board of Regents at their July meeting, Smith said. The Texas A&M College of Medicine, established in 1973, is the result of the combined efforts of Texas A&M, the Olin E. Teague Veterans' Center, Scott & White Hospital and Clinic, Darnall Army Community Hospital at Fort Hood and the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Waco. The land for the new building was donated by the Scott, Sherwood and Brindley Foundation of Scott & White. The A&M clinical campus in Temple currently enrolls 100 medical students and 225 post-graduate medical residents. For the past two years, the college has had the highest percentage of graduates entering family practice residencies.
