Lobster Boy's battered wife sentenced to 12 years in prison

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Even as she was sentenced Monday to 12 years in prison, the wife of sideshow performer Lobster Boy maintained the contract slaying of her pincer-handed husband protected her family. "My husband was going to kill my family — I believe that from the bottom of my heart," Mary Teresa Stiles said through tears as she stood before the judge. "I'm sorry this happened, but my family is safe now. ... At least I know they're alive, and I thank God for that."

Acting Circuit Judge William Fuente said he was "genuinely sympathetic" to the 56-year-old grandmother and had no doubt she was a battered spouse.

"What happened happened and it's a tragedy," Fuente told Stiles. "And there is a price that has to be paid, as unjust as that may seem to you."

He gave her concurrent sentences for manslaughter and conspiracy to commit first-degree murder. State guidelines call for anywhere from seven to 22 years. Stiles has already served nearly two years in jail or under house arrest.

Defense attorney Arnold Levine estimated his client will end up serving no more than a third of the remaining 10 years and could be out of prison in as little as a year and a half. Her sentence will be followed by five years on probation.

Mrs. Stiles was convicted last month in the November 1992 death of 55-year-old carnival performer Grady Stiles Jr., a teen-age neighbor who had been paid $1,500 shot him twice in the back of the head as he sat in his trailer watching television.

The neighbor, 19-year-old Christopher Wyant, was convicted of second-degree murder and has been sentenced to 20 years behind bars.
