Correction

In Tuesday's issue of The Battalion, the story on Page 2 regarding the Wash Haus incident involving Hurricane Harry's and The Top, Seaback is the correct spelling. Also, the owner of the Wash Haus, Amir Omar, grosses $13.3 million a month. He does not earn $13.3 million a month.

Campus Crimestoppers comes to Texas A&M this fall

By Stephanie Dube
THE BATTALION

In an effort to encourage student participation in stopping crime, Texas A&M's Student Government is developing an on-campus Crimestoppers program which is scheduled to be in operation before the end of the fall semester. Gene Zdziarski, assistant director of student life at A&M, is a liaison between the Brazos County Crimestoppers and the campus Crimestoppers. He said the campus Crimestoppers, which is modeled after the county Crimestoppers program, is expected to be a positive program which will significantly help to decrease on-campus crime.

"The county program deals with felonies, while campus and school programs deal with misdemeanor crimes," Zdziarski said. The A&M campus, Zdziarski said, falls under the Brazos County Crimestopper's jurisdiction for felony crimes. Lt. Bert Kretzschmar, who works with crime prevention through the University Police Department, said these misdemeanors will include crimes such as stolen backpacks, computer parts, bikes and purses. "A&M's number one crime problem is theft," Kretzschmar said, "and people lose property primarily through opportunity theft."

Opportunity theft, he said, occurs when items which people have left unattended or unlocked are stolen. Kretzschmar said the new Crimestoppers program will provide students another method of being more involved and aware of crimes on campus. "It will be another avenue for which students can report crimes," Kretzschmar said. "Often students see what's going on, and this is an avenue to remain anonymous." Brooke Leslie, student body president, said people who call Crimestoppers with tips will be able to remain anonymous. "Callers will be given a number, and if the tip leads to solving the crime, they will be reimbursed financially depending on the degree of the crime," Leslie said. However, Kretzschmar said, if a student witnesses a crime in progress, he or she should call the police dispatcher immediately. Crimestoppers, he said, is a good program for students with information about a crime. "If they have overheard talk or have knowledge of a crime, this is good for Crimestoppers," Kretzschmar said. While Student Government will run campus Crimestoppers program, UPD will assist the program by advising students. "I am an adviser to the program," Kretzschmar said. "I have gone to the meetings and advised the Student Government. I am their police liaison and will be able to tell them if a tip led to an arrest." In the past, Kretzschmar said, county Crimestoppers helped solve many crimes, including an incident where seven rings were stolen from an alumni center, and another incident where a tip led to locating a serial killer. Zdziarski said the county Crimestoppers has been very helpful in solving crimes. The tips have resulted in 941 arrests, 1,031 cases cleared, which cases being investigated were solved, $1.3 million of stolen property recovered, and $1.2 million of illegal
