RHA president looks forward to new year

By Amanda Fowle
THE BATTALION

The new Residence Hall Association president, Owen Ross, wants on-campus residents to know that, through RHA, they have the power to change their living environment.

"I want the residents to know that if we work together," Owen Ross said, "we can better our living environment."

Ross said RHA is the voice of the 9,000 students living in the 34 residence halls.

"People sit back and gripe about something that they think is wrong," he said, "but they don't realize that, through RHA, they can work to change it."

Unfortunately, Ross said, not all of the changes students want are made.

The students can ask for changes, he said, but the final decisions are made solely by the administration.

"All we can do as RHA is be the voice of the students," he said. "We can ask for changes, but can't make the changes. The changes don't always happen."

He said sometimes the changes students want are overridden by A&M administrators for security or other reasons.

Ross wants students to realize that the Residential Hall Association is there to benefit them.

"My motto while campaigning was, 'Ask not what you can do for RHA, but what RHA can do for you,'" he said.

Michael Osterbuhr, RHA adviser, said residents must take advantage of RHA before it can help them.

"Like any governmental organization, RHA can help the students only if they use it," Osterbuhr said. "The residents must go to their hall councils or RHA representatives and communicate their needs."

Ross said RHA takes the complaints and suggestions of the residents and tries to work out a solution.

An example, he said, is that because of complaints from residents about visitation, RHA has formed an ad hoc committee to review the current visitation

Owen Ross, Residence Hall Association president, encourages on-campus residents to get involved and affect changes.

Jewish A&M students observe holiday

By Angela Neaves
THE BATTALION

Jewish Texas A&M students and faculty will begin a new year this week with the celebration of Rosh Hashana.

Scott Bernstein, a senior bioengineering major, said Rosh Hashana, which began Monday night and continues through Wednesday, is a time to think of sins of the past year and what can be done to correct them.

Yom Kippur, which begins at sundown Sept. 14, is the day of atonement, Bernstein said.

"During Yom Kippur we pray and fast and are judged by God," Bernstein said. "Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur are times of starting over, of reflecting on the past and of shaping the future."

Rabbi Peter Tarlow of the Hillel Jewish Student Association said the 5,000-year-old tradition took on a special meaning this year because the Jewish new year happened to fall at the beginning of a new school year.

"It is no secret that Texas A&M had a difficult year last year," Tarlow said. "The whole University can use this time of turning over a new leaf. Everyone can share in the new beginning."

As Texas A&M becomes an international university, the Jewish community is also becoming international, with students arriving from Australia, Mexico and all over the world, Tarlow said.

"The Jewish community is rapidly becoming an international community with a commonality of faith," Tarlow said. "Although the accents may be different, we all know the same prayers in the same Hebrew language."

Texas A&M has long been struggling to be open to students of all ethnicities and religions. However, it can be insensitive to ethnic and racial issues that vary from the norm, Tarlow said.

"It is sometimes quite difficult to explain to some faculty members that a Jewish student cannot be expected to be in classes on Rosh Hashana," Tarlow said. "Jewish students and professors sometimes do not last long here because of this insensitivity."

Memorial services for slain students to be held tonight

Memorial services for Crystal Miller and Regina Broadus, the two Texas A&M University students murdered in DeSoto last May, will be held tonight at 8:30 pm in Rudder Auditorium.

Guest speakers will include Dr. Malon J. Southerland, vice president for student affairs; Brooke Leslie, student body president and Dr. Altie Larke, Jr., associate professor of Agricultural Education.

The two students are being awarded posthumous degrees. Broadus' degree was awarded in August, and Miller's degree will be awarded in May 1995.

In this threatening world, everyone needs a PAAL.

Anyone can be a victim of violent crime, anytime, anywhere. Protect yourself with the PAAL II personal attack alarm. When its pin is pulled, the PAAL II emits an ear-piercing alarm and a bright flashing light, startling an attacker and drawing the attention of anyone within a wide area. Unlike other protective devices, the PAAL II can't be used against you. The light on the PAAL II can also be used as a flashlight. Clip a lightweight PAAL II on your clothing wherever you go. It's your best defense against attack or harassment. The technology is Quorum. The opportunity is yours.
