Here, last month, 922 good people got a pin prick, and earned themselves $46,000 cash

....and helped people they never knew!

They sat back on big leather lounge chairs and relaxed or studied for exams. They exchanged recipes, talked about love, children, life, happenings, boys, girls, politics, tomorrow, french class, car repair, baseball, fishing, and delivering kittens. In 60 minutes they were up and away, cash in hand, feeling good.

You have never opened a door on a friendlier place and the regular extra money is very nice.

Everybody needs you.

Students voice concern over library copier rates

By Michele Brinkmann
THE BATTALION

Some Texas A&M students are complaining of this semester's 100 percent price increase in the cost of photocopies made in Sterling C. Evans Library.

The price of copies increased from five cents to 10 cents over the two-week break before the fall semester. During this time, the University switched change contractors who had submitted bids to the A&M business services office.

Pete Manias, the student services chairman for the Student Senate, said although not many people have complained to him, he has talked to constituents who think the raise was too drastic.

"I am trying to see what I can do about it," Manias said.

"A lot of people use the library and raising the cost of copies without students knowing was unfair. We'll do what we can to lower the price or at least find out why it happened," Manias said.

Manias said he is waiting to see if the increase is discussed at the next library council meeting.

Jim Sawtelle, a graduate student in business administration, said the price increase is unfair.

"It reminds me of price gouging," Sawtelle said.

"The price went up 100 percent, if it continues at 10 cents a copy there will be many students who will have a lot of additional expenses," Sawtelle said.

Sawtelle wants the University to either reduce the price or allow additional contractors into the library to compete against the 10 cent copiers.

"Many places in town charge two and five cents for copies," he said. "If the University can not provide what the local market can, then they should be allowed to set up in the library."

Gerry Smith, associate director of A&M business services, said he compared library copy prices to other Bryan-College Station stores that offer copying.

He said prices varied between two and 15 cents. He said the University raised prices of the copies to 10 cents because it would have been too hard to charge students a price such as seven cents per copy.

After the previous company's contract expired, the University accepted bids from several companies and went with the best option, Smith said. "I think the program will be tremendous for library patrons," Smith said. "Patrons will receive new, better and faster services."

Sawtelle said he didn't think the increase in service is proportional to the increase in price.

"The service did not go up 100 percent like the price did," he said.

"The new machines copy things faster. You don't have to stand in line as long, but that advantage is not worth the price.

"The price increase affects

Study Group works to keep tuition rates down

By Melissa Jacobs
THE BATTALION

The Texas A&M Legislative Study Group (LSG) is working to make sure tuition is not raised when the Texas Legislature begins meeting in January.

Holly Womack, subchair for research, said there is a rumor that the legislature would like to increase tuition.

"We've also noticed grants are decreasing and loans are increasing," she said. "That is a big focus."

Womack said the group members work as student liaisons between the Texas Legislature and Texas A&M. "We let the legislators know how we feel about things," she said.

Kathy Partain, director of the LSG, said the group researches issues affecting higher education.

"We inform and advise the Texas Legislature," she said. Womack said LSG is divided into four subcommittees - appropriations, permanent university fund and financial aid. Each of the subcommittees has about five students.

"Our research is conducted by contacting certain orga-
