Toy retailers agree to remove realistic toy guns from store shelves

Parents, police and gun-control advocates are praising the decision by two retailers to stop selling realistic-looking toy guns.

"Police officers have to make split-second decisions," said New York City police Officer James Davis. "We don't have time to think, 'Is it real, or is it Memorex?'"

Davis was at the Toys "R" Us headquarters Friday when the world's largest toy retailer announced it will stop selling toy guns in its U.S. stores. The company, based in Paramus, N.J., will continue to sell the guns overseas.

Kay-Bee Toy Stores, based in Pittsfield, Mass., said it would immediately begin removing and destroying all realistic toy guns from the shelves of its 1,000 stores nationwide.

The announcements follow two recent shootings in New York City in which police officers mistook toy guns for the real thing.

"If it saves a couple kid's lives, I think it's a good thing," said Steve Hansell as he shopped Friday at the Toys "R" Us in Lawrenceville, N.J. "Actually it's a courageous move. They're going to lose business."

The store's shelves were a smorgasbord of toy guns Friday, some realistic and some not. Buyers had their choice of AK-47s, M-16 rifles, double-barrel shotguns, rifles, pistols and Uzis.

"Because so many kids are carrying real guns, for kids to carry realistic-looking toy guns is incredibly dangerous and incredibly stupid," said Cheryl Brolin, spokeswoman for Handgun Control Inc., a Washington-based non-profit organization.

Other retailers already have pulled the toy guns from their shelves.

Bradlee's Inc., a discount department store chain based in Braintree, Mass., said months ago it wouldn't order toy guns for the Christmas shopping season.

And Troy, Mich.-based Kmart Corp. stopped selling realistic toy guns about 10 months ago, spokesman Stephen Pagnani said.

Under a 1990 federal law, toy makers can sell realistic toy guns as long as they are equipped with a cap or cork at the muzzle or an orange mark to show they are toys. But the caps can be removed and the guns painted to look real.

Runaway bulldozer terrorizes New York auto dealership

WEST SENECA, N.Y. (AP) — An unmanned bulldozer rumbled out of control for half a mile, crunching 16 cars at an auto dealership and just missing a video store and some power lines.

Police said someone started the bulldozer Saturday after construction workers left a nearby demolition site. The person drove it a short while before jumping off.

No one was hurt as it thundered over railroad tracks, just missed two sets of power lines and passed within 15 feet of a buster Video Store.

Customers said the bulldozer disappeared in some brush, reappeared climbing a hill and headed toward the dealership.
