Elephant Walk

underclassmen will get involved with Elephant Walk.

"I think it's still going to happen," Sonya Lehmann, education subchair for the Traditions Council, said. "The class of '96 saw it happen when they were freshmen and it was still bad. So they think that the tradition is to grope out the seniors."

Horseplay between juniors and seniors has been a problem in the past.

"There is a lot of horseplay in the Corps,"

Felicia Miller, public relations co-chair for the Class of '96, said. "If it does go on, it will happen on the quad in their own territory. It's hard to deter because it's on the quad. Hopefully it won't encourage others."

Others are optimistic that Elephant Walk-Old Army Style will become a tradition.

"We've been so successful with the past," Billy Pickard, associate director for facilities, said. "When we have a year with no trouble, that should be a tradition."

All of the meeting's participants have hopes of a successful Elephant Walk this year.

"From personal experience, every year it's going to get better," Lehmann said.

The Class of '96 Council is in the process of planning events for juniors to be a part of during the walk.

Tentatively some of the plans are for the juniors to meet at Bonfire sight where there will be a motivational speaker. There will be a yell practice led by the junior yell leaders.

They may have a picture on Kyle Field in the shape of '96. The committee has also thought about doing a service project where canned food would be collected on the way in to Kyle Field.

The idea is for the juniors to have something to do to keep them away from the seniors for the day.

"We won't know the route of the seniors," Miller said. "But we will know where we can't be."

The juniors are also working to improve Elephant Walk from the past.

"We're trying to work towards a clean Elephant Walk," Miller said. "We're taking major steps with the T-shirt design and PE. We feel it will be better than it has been in the past."

The Class of '96 is working with the Old Army idea for Elephant Walk.

"We're trying to go back to the way it used to be," Miller said. "We want it to be up there with Muster and Silver Taps."
