"There was a time last week when we had three a two-th ture and freshmen in the game on de fense, along with three true sophomores," Mackovic said. "We've had to rush a lot of state ba majorit Lawmak session i youngsters to play." Offensively, Texas will employ a rotating quarterback shuffle, with sophomore Shea Morenz getting the majority of the snaps over redshirt freshman James Brown. Neither player provided much of a spark Neither player last weekend, as Brown led Texas on its only two scoring drives. Dating back to his start in the Oklahoma game, Brown has thrown a touchdown pass in three straight contests.

Junior wide receiver Lovell Pinckney will provide the Longhorns with a size advantage against the feisty Aggie secondary. The 6 foot 5 inch, 230 pound Pinckney, who runs a 4.4, will be matched up against far shorter A&M cornerbacks. Pinckney is sec ond on the team to Eric Jackson with 20 receptions for 251 yards and four touchdowns. Jackson, a senior from Corpus Christi, provides Texas with a deep threat. His average of 18.3 yards per

"We spent a lot of time Tuesday working on our basic field offense," Mackovic said. "We expect a heck of a game, and still have a lot of work to do.

Senior Roderick Walker and junior Priest Holmes lead the Longhorn rushing attack. Between the two backs, they have racked up 923 yards on 208 carries.

As is usually the case when these two teams tee it up, prior statistics can be put aside, Baskin said.

Brockermeyer is a multiple-time All-Southwest Con-ference performer on the offensive line, and has yet to allow a quarterback sack this year. this year.

Senior wide receiver Chris Sanders, who was ejected on a double personal foul very early in last weekend's game, said he feels the Aggie offense needs to get back on track after two "off weeks" against

SMU and Rice. "We came out real flat-foot-ed against SMU, " Sanders said. "This week in practice, Coach Ensminger has gotten back to the basics of football and we've begun the format of Do it hard, do it right and then do it again." It is likely the Aggies will attempt to run the ball down the Longhorns' throats with regularity on Saturday, as the UT defense ranks a horrible 65th in the nation, allowing 183 yards per game. Sanders is confident however, that if the Longhorns focus all their efforts on stopping the run, the receives can easily help move the ball.

"When I see eight people up on the line of scrimmage, I just lick my chops, " Sanders said. "People are saying said. 'People are saying we're the best receivers you've never heard of. When it's our time, we know it's time to go and we'll be ready to contribute."

For seniors like Sanders and Armstrong, Saturday's game offers the opportunity to go through four years of A&M football with four wins over Texas, a rare feat. Armstrong said although he is wary of the Longhorns, the seniors have every intention of winning the game. "I respect them a lot because they have a really good
