Foreman, champ at 45, still finds time for church, family

HOUSTON (AP) — After spending the night laughing and crying with excitement, Natalie Foreman got up early, got dressed and dutifully went to church just like her father wanted.

But this wasn't just any Sunday at any church.

This is boxing champ's George Foreman's church, and it was the day after the 45-year-old won the IBF and WBA championships in Las Vegas. "It was important to him that we come here," said 14-year-old Natalie, who attended services with three younger siblings.

"Church is more important (to him) than boxing."
Only a few others showed up at The Church of the Lord Jesus Christ, with the rest of the congregation apparently at home thinking there would be no service because of Foreman's stunning victory.

But, the modest church with rose-colored walls opened as usual, and the sermon was delivered by Jody Steptoe, a nephew of Foreman's who had rushed back from Las Vegas for the task.

"Normally he's (Foreman) here. He loves to be here," a beaming Steptoe said outside the church, established by Foreman more than a decade ago in a modest neighborhood in northeast Houston.

"Everything went well and we're happy for him."

The boxer-turned-preacher-turned-actor-turned champion returned Sunday afternoon to Houston, where a celebration dinner was planned at his mother's house. Foreman was fully expected to indulge his colossal appetite.

"He just wanted to know what we were going to cook for him," Natalie said, recalling her last conversation with Foreman before the fight.

Saturday night, the 45-year-old, 250-pound Foreman knocked out the much younger Michael Moorer, 26, recapturing at least part of the championship he lost when he was knocked out by Muhammad Ali on Oct. 30, 1974.

When it was over at 2:03 of the 10th round, Foreman knelt in prayer in a neutral corner.

Foreman now is the oldest fighter to win a championship in any weight class.

"For most of it, I was hiding," laughed Natalie, who sometimes watched the match on television. "I didn't want to watch it. I was nervous."

Afterward, everybody was "crying and laughing. We started calling everybody."

"I'm proud of him," she said. "I cried all night, I couldn't stop. I was laughing and crying."

PEOPLE

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Zulu dancers and child singers greeted Whitney Houston at a museum Friday, and the singer pledged about $281,000 to help children in South Africa.

Houston will perform three concerts in South Africa beginning Tuesday.

"Children in South Africa deserve a safe place to live, good health and someone to hold them when they go to sleep," she said at a news conference.

Her donation will support work in children's health, homelessness, education and also go toward advocacy groups.

The concerts will be broadcast by Home Box Office.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mickey Rourke wins the celebrity room trashing sweepstakes over his pal Johnny Depp.

Rourke's total at the ritzy Plaza Hotel was $20,000, said Donald Trump, owner of the Plaza. The $5,000-a-night suite was so damaged Thursday it had to be closed to guests for repairs.

"His behavior was completely irresponsible, and it cannot and will not be tolerated," Trump said in a statement.

The actor checked into the Plaza three weeks ago and was kicked out after he "went berserk" and "broke furniture that was unbreakable," the New York Post said, quoting an unidentified Plaza source.

A source in Trump's office said Rourke was banned from the Plaza for life.

No charges were filed, but Rourke should expect a bill.

Depp was arrested in September after trashing a room at the Mark Hotel. The charge was dropped after he agreed to pay for nearly $10,000 in damage.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The media of the '90s have created an "idiot culture," Carl Bernstein says.

Journalists have abandoned their mission to pursue the "best obtainable version of the truth," focusing instead on the sensational, the lurid and the titillating, the former Washington Post reporter said Thursday at Salem College.

Bernstein won a Pulitzer for breaking the Watergate story with Bob Woodward.
