Elephant Walk

Cody Burke, president of the Class of '95, said he urges junior class members to recognize what Ol' Army Elephant Walks were like.

"It's a time when the seniors used to walk around and remember the times they spent at A&M," Burke said. "They celebrated the past times. It's time we get back to the real tradition."

"We ask that the junior class to respect the senior tradition and celebrate their class' activities. They will be in our shoes in a year."

Representatives from various A&M organizations, such as Bus Operations, the University Police Department and Parking, Transit and Traffic Services, are working with the senior council to organize street activity during Elephant Walk.

Doug Williams, manager of Bus Operations, said several bus routes will probably be changed to account for the large number of students crossing the streets between 2 and 4 p.m. He said some buses will need to drop off their students at different points.

"We're probably not cutting the routes entirely," Williams said, "but students may be inconvenienced."

UPD will have officers stationed at several points along the Walk to handle traffic.

Some parking lots and streets may be temporarily closed due to the build-up of traffic as students cross the streets. The entrance to campus from Wellborn Road will most likely be closed entirely during the hours of Elephant Walk.

Burke said the success of Elephant Walk will not depend on the route, but rather the attitude along the route.

"That's what we've put all our efforts into," Burke said, "attitude and publicity. Changing the attitude is what's important."

Trial

Department of Food Services, and Mary Miller, assistant vice president for finance and administration, testified on behalf of Smith as character witnesses.

All of the character witnesses said Smith was a truthful, law-abiding citizen who had a reputation of being tough but fair.

Dick DeGuerin, Smith's defense attorney, recalled Jane Schneider, a senior management analyst for A&M who testified Monday about the differences between two proposals that were submitted to A&M by two private companies to take over the campus bookstore. The two companies were Barnes and Noble and Follett College Stores.

The trial will continue today at 9 a.m. in the 361st District Court.

Steakhouse list a fraud, Fertel says

DALLAS (AP) — It all started when the Ruth's Chris steakhouse chain was bumped off the list of America's Top 10 Steakhouses.

That's when Ruth Fertel began her crusade to expose the annual list as a fraud, and that's when it became a federal case.

Fertel, who has 42 steakhouses nationwide, contends the list is bought and paid for by her nemesis, Dale Wamstad, owner of Del Frisco's Double Eagle Steak House in Dallas - No. 3 on the current list.

"Ruth's Chris will call it bogus and fraudulent, but I call it brilliant marketing," said Wamstad, whose business boomed when he began advertising his ranking in airline magazines.

Ethernet

Butch Kemper, the project director, said out of the four connected halls, about 60 students are using the Ethernet connections in their rooms.

Kemper said that more students are hooking up every week. The Ethernet Task Force will make a proposal to the Department of Student Affairs in late November as to whether the Ethernet connections should be expanded to the rest of the residence halls or not.

Barry McKinney, graduate intern in the facilities and operations office, said the task force is soliciting responses from students about if they want Ethernet connections or not.

"Students can call me at 862-3150 with their input," he said. "Students can also E-mail the task force at 'dorm-net@tamu.edu' for more information about Ethernet. A survey will be forwarded to them."

Aaron Bawcom, a member of the task force, said they have received about 15 responses to the E-mail surveys.

"Every person is full throttle in favor of the Ethernet connections," he said.

Students responding to a Residence Hall Association survey, however, were not so supportive, McKinney said.

"It's about 50-50," he said. "Half of the people said they want it and would pay for it. The other half said they would take it, but wouldn't want to pay for it."

The students would have to pay a maximum of $2.50 per month for the connections in their halls.

The cost would most likely be added to the room rent, McKinney said.

The task force said they are trying to educate students about the benefits of Ethernet.

Bawcom compared Ethernet to the telephone.

"Ethernet is just about as useful, if not more useful, than the telephone," Bawcom said. "It just has to catch on like the telephone did."
