Help Wanted

Three ways to beat the high cost of college.

1. The Montgomery GI Bill
2. Student loan repayment
3. Part-time income

The Army Reserve Alternate Training Program is a smart way to pay for college.

First, if you qualify, the Montgomery GI Bill can provide you with up to $6,840 for current college expenses or approved vo/tech training.

Second, if you have or obtain a qualified student loan not in default, you may get it paid off at the rate of 15% per year or $500, whichever is greater, up to a maximum of $10,000. Selected military skills can double that maximum.

Third, you can earn part-time money in college, and here's how it works: One summer you take Basic Training, and the next summer you receive skill training at an Army school. You'll earn over $1,500 for Basic and even more for skill training. Then you'll attend monthly meetings at an Army Reserve unit near your college, usually one weekend a month plus two weeks a year. You'll be paid over $105 a weekend to start. It's worth thinking about. Give us a call:

Slocum wary of lapse in focus

Aggies face unfamiliarity of play after Texas game

By Nick Georgandis
THE BATTALION

The buzzword around the Texas A&M football team this week was "letdown." After swamping their arch-rival Longhorns 34-10 last weekend, the Aggies face a tough road trip as they travel to Kentucky to face a 5-4 Louisville team that is aiming for a bowl game appearance.

"I have definite concern about a possible team letdown," head coach R.C. Slocum said. "This is not familiar territory for us. We usually pull out all the stops for Texas. It's tough having won a big game and having to get our feet back on the ground, on the road, against a team you've beaten the last two years."

Despite Slocum's concern, sophomore tailback and kick returner Leeland McElroy said he doesn't see the team having any lapses, despite the strangeness of the schedule this season.

"It seems weird to play someone after UT, we usually have a month off to get ready for the Cotton Bowl," McElroy said. "We'll never forget what happened at SMU, Texas is just another stepping stone towards our goal (of a perfect season)."

Based on the previous two years of the A&M-Louisville series, the Aggies should have no problem Saturday afternoon. In the last two years, A&M has outscored the Cardinals 82-25, although both games were played at Kyle Field.

Last week, the Cardinals were embarrassed at home by Boston College at home, snapping their 11-game home-winning streak. With a win over A&M, and another over Tulsa in their season-finale, Louisville could still qualify for a bowl appearance. The post-season drive of the Cardinals has Slocum worried about the psychological aspect of the game.

"They're playing for a bowl game and coming off a loss to Boston College," Slocum said. "They have lots of positives, and we've got lots of negatives with this game sandwiched between a big win and our home finale."

Despite their quest for intensity and team unity, several of the Aggies are nearing individual season and career marks. Senior tailback Rodney Thomas is at the forefront of the record-breaking front. With 786 yards this season, Thomas is within striking distance of 1000 yards rushing for the first time in his career, after he fell just four yards short last season. Thomas also needs 68 yards to reach 3,000 career rushing yards and is just two touchdowns behind Darren Lewis' all-time career touchdown mark (Thomas has 43).

Although it is doubtful he will see another kickoff this season, McElroy has now moved into third place on A&M's all-time list for kickoff return yards with 868 on just 20 returns, a 43.4 yard average. Also hoping to move up the all-time charts is junior quarterback Corey Pullig, who is now tied for third in passing touchdowns and fourth in career wins as a starter with 22.

Individual records aside, senior linebacker and Butkus Award semi-finalist Antonio Armstrong said there is one goal that all the players are working towards and are determined to achieve, a season without a loss.

"The way we get psyched is that we've got two games left and we've got to come up big," Armstrong said. "If we're the championship team we are, we'll be plenty up for it."

oral commitment to the University of Alabama. Proximity and the Architecture department at A&M made Oliver's decision final.

When Oliver does hit the field, he said he will be looking for immediate success. Oliver credits his confidence to the experience that came with playing at one of the state's top programs in Arlington Lamar.

"We had high expectations of him," Koening said. "When he came in, we were really excited."

Oliver is the son of former major league baseball player Al Oliver. As a youth, Oliver got the chance to travel all over the United States and visit big league locker rooms. Oliver, however, was not pressured into playing his father's game.

Oliver settled for soccer and became an all-District goalkeeper.

Netters

While Oliver was watching a high school baseball game during his senior year, a friend of Oliver's told a Colorado Rockies scout that "Al Oliver's son was at the game". The scout called Oliver up a few days later asking him if he wanted to try out in May. Oliver declined the offer saying a few months wasn't enough time to get ready.

"It's an opportunity that most people never get," Oliver said. "Baseball is a sport that takes a lot of experience. I needed more than a month. You can't just jump out on the field."

The immediate future will see Oliver going through rehabilitation to get back on the football field. Koening said Oliver could be better than ever when he returns in the spring. With his driving spirit and competitive, athletic bloodlines, the Aggies are betting on it.
