French inmate's family petitioning for his release from Texas prison

PARIS (AP) — Family members, friends and local officials armed with T-shirts saying "Frenchie Come Home" have mobilized to repatriate a local man imprisoned in Texas for the murder of his stepfather.

Pierrcyk Castellazzi, 37, received a 40-year sentence for the slaying of Ken Churchill, a Texas prison guard, in 1989.

Castellazzi's mother, Evelyn Martellon-Churchill, said she fears for her son's life because she says he has been repeatedly harassed by prison employees.

"Pierrcyk is not an American and he is being held in a Texas prison for the murder of a Texas penitentiary employee," she said from her apartment filled with baseball hats, cowboy belts, Elvis posters and other Americana.

Despite anxiety over her son's welfare, Martellon-Churchill received a letter from Pierrcyk on Monday saying he was well. He is also aware of her efforts to bring him home, said their lawyer, Jean-Paul Escudier.

Castellazzi was serving his term at the Michael Unit maximum security state prison in Tennessee Colony, about 45 miles southwest of Tyler.

Martellon-Churchill wants the U.S. government to repatriate her son under a Franco-American agreement that allows prisoners to serve their sentences in their home countries.

The mayor of Toulouse, Dominique Baudis, has vowed to fly to Texas as part of a "humanitarian mission" to press for the transfer.

He also launched a letter-writing campaign targeting the U.S. Embassy, as well as the French ministers of justice and foreign affairs.

The inmate's supporters have also printed T-shirts saying "Pierrcyk We're Waiting for You" and "Frenchie Come Home."

The French government responded to the impassioned appeal by asking Washington to return Castellazzi to France. The U.S. Embassy in Paris had no immediate comment.

Castellazzi was living with his stepfather under a false American identity when Churchill's nude body was found in his suburban Texas home, bludgeoned and shot to death.

Castellazzi was discovered at the murder site but has maintained his innocence. Lawyer Escudier alleges that Churchill was slain by a boyfriend Churchill had infected with the AIDS virus.

Escudier said he was determined to prove the innocence of his client, who he said was caught between "a passionate settling of scores."
