Zedillo visits troubled Chiapas

TUXTLA GUTIERREZ, Mexico (AP) — New President Ernesto Zedillo said Thursday on his first official visit to Chiapas that he was seeking to promote peace by his presence at the inauguration of a new state governor.

"I come here to express my firm belief that we must and shall achieve peace and justice through dialogue, through negotiation," said Zedillo in a speech after the inauguration of Chiapas Gov. Eduardo Robledo Rincon.

Some 3,000 anti-government demonstrators, amassed in the state capital, had threatened to block the inauguration, but no violence was reported after the ceremony. The protesters claimed Robledo won an Aug. 21 election fraudulently.

Zedillo's message appeared to be yet another exhortation for Chiapas rebels to resume peace talks with the Mexican government. But rebel commander Marcos warned earlier this week that Robledo's inauguration would shatter an 11-month-old cease-fire that quieted a New Year's uprising.

Zedillo said his week-old administration has a firm commitment to attack the poverty, social injustices and discrimination against ethnic Indian communities that have inspired violence.

"I come to Chiapas to reiterate my commitment to take on the demands of those who suffer in conditions of misery... especially the indigenous communities," said Zedillo in a speech during his brief visit Thursday.

Zedillo announced that the federal and state governments have formed a new commission for the development and well-being of Chiapas.

He said the commission would supervise efforts to bring more jobs, government social spending, health care and other programs to this state, one of Mexico's poorest.

Mexico's new president said he and Robledo discussed a transition in which both sides could take part in developing the most rural parts of Chiapas.

"We all want to build peace and well-being that Chiapas residents deserve. This means we must always choose the road of dialogue," added Zedillo, reiterating that the Mexican Army would continue to abide by a Jan. 12 cease-fire.

"Before you, I emphatically pledge that the federal government will initiate no violent action, or take any authoritarian steps in Chiapas," said Zedillo. "Negotiation is the base for the solution."

"I come here [to Chiapas] to express my firm belief that we must and shall achieve peace and justice through dialogue, through negotiation."

— Ernesto Zedillo, president of Mexico

National Football League owners used replacement players in 1987. Attendance was way down — averaging 23,626 a game — but the players abandoned their strike after three weeks of games featuring replacements.

Baseball players said they don't think fans would pay attention to replacement games. "It strikes me that you're asking a lot of questions that are hypothetical," union head Donald Fehr said. "I don't give the questions or answers significance one way or the other."

The respondents were 611 adult baseball fans from a random national poll taken Nov. 30 to Dec. 6 by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants. Results have an error margin of 4 percent.

While just 19 percent of women said they would attend fewer games if replacements are used, 33 percent of men said they would go to the ballpark less often. Nineteen percent of those 65 and older would go to fewer games, but 31 percent of those aged 18-34 would attend less often.

Television viewing would be similar, with 21 percent of women and 33 percent of men saying they would watch fewer games.

When asked generally about the possible use of replacement players next spring, 49 percent of fans were in favor and 41 percent were opposed. Thirty-three percent of fans 65-plus oppose replacement players, while 47 percent of those 18-34 opposed the concept.

Forty-six percent of those making $50,000 or more are opposed, while 38 percent of those making less than $15,000 are against the move.

Sixty-seven percent of fans blame both sides for the strike. 21 percent blame players and 46 percent blame owners. Among fans making less than $15,000, 57 percent blame both sides, 17 percent blame owners and 26 percent blame players.
