Mexican witness freed from jail in border patrol beating case

BROWNSVILLE, (AP) — Jose Lopez Hernandez was jailed not for committing a crime, but for witnessing one.

The 18-year-old undocumented immigrant from Mexico is considered a key witness in two U.S. Border Patrol agents' defense against charges of beating up a one-footed Mexican man. But Lopez's attorney says it's wrong to jail a witness simply out of fear that he may not show up to testify at trial — regardless of his immigration status.

"All he wants to do is go home," said John Wescot Sandlin, a Harlingen immigration attorney who took Lopez's case for free.

The legal controversy involves patrol agents David R. Gonzalez and Manny Figueroa. They are charged in state court in Brownsville with beating an illegal immigrant named David Bergman, throwing away his crutches, and then telling him to swim back across the Rio Grande to Mexico on March 16, 1994.

Figueroa's defense attorney, Ernesto Gamez Jr., said Lopez's testimony can damage the credibility of Bergman's claims. Gamez, who portrays Bergman as a "border bandit" who robs illegal immigrants as they cross the river, said that Lopez will testify that he was one of Bergman's victims in January 1994.

Bergman denies taking part in robberies.

The Border Patrol picked up Lopez as an illegal immigrant in November and detained him at the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's detention center near Bayview. Sandlin said the normal procedure for an illegal border crosser from Mexico would have been a quick deportation, not a prolonged detention.

Last month, Gamez obtained an order from state District Judge Robert Garza that Lopez remain under detention to secure his testimony.

Lopez was transferred to the Cameron County Jail last week to await Figueroa's trial, scheduled for Jan. 30, and Gonzalez's trial, expected next month.

Gamez said the detention was necessary because he has no power to subpoena a witness in Mexico.

But when attorney Sandlin asked for a hearing to explore the issue Monday, Gamez agreed to take a videotaped deposition from the witness. Gamez withdrew his request for detention after the three-hour deposition Tuesday, and Lopez was released from jail.

"This whole thing could have been avoided if they had deposed him in the first place," Sandlin said. "I think it's a regrettable approach, and I think that if they had thought about it, they wouldn't have done it."

In June 1993, Bergman's foot was caught and severed between a train and railroad tracks as he fled immigration authorities, according to news accounts.

Agents Gonzalez and Figueroa are charged with injuring an invalid. Figueroa faces an additional count of failing to stop Gonzalez from striking Bergman. The agents have pleaded innocent.

Gamez said he wants Lopez's testimony in an attempt to throw out the indictment. He argues that Bergman does not fit the state's legal definition for an invalid because he can support himself by robbing people.

Teen cable show focuses on positives

CORPUS CHRISTI, (AP) — Tired of bad news about teenagers? Then check out a new cable access program focusing on the positive things teenagers do in the Corpus Christi community.

The monthly 30-minute program called "Teen Scene" is aired on a public access station. The first show was broadcast Friday and will be rebroadcast throughout the month in vacant time slots until a new show is aired Feb. 10.

"In this area, there aren't any television programs that just focus on teen life," said District Judge Jack Hunter, who helped launch the show.

"Young folks don't watch the local newscasts, and there is nothing for them. I am hoping that real events like current events, sporting events, human interest stories and school events can generate interest."

Hunter, who heads the Youth Crime Prevention Task Force, came up with the show after seeing a similar program in the San Antonio area.

Ruben Ramirez, a senior at Corpus Christi Moody High School and a program organizer, said he's already learned a lot about his peers' impact on the community.

"I never realized that teenagers do so many things," he said.

The first health segment was about the common cold, although Ramirez promises to tackle bigger issues such as teen pregnancy and AIDS.
