Week in Congress marked by bickering, Byrd-lock

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bedlam rules one day, civility the next as Republicans and Democrats adjust to their new roles in the House of Representatives, under GOP control for the first time in four decades.

Take the Mexican bailout legislation that President Clinton says is in the national interest. When the idea first surfaced, legislative leaders went to the White House and emerged pledging to do whatever is necessary to restore confidence in the peso without affecting the budget at home.

Within days, some conservative Republicans announced opposition to Clinton's proposal for $40 billion in loan guarantees. Some Democrats sought amendments to protect Mexican worker rights, reprising the party's 1993 divisions on the North American Free Trade Agreement. Republicans wanted to make sure that Cuban President Fidel Castro didn't benefit from the measure, and suddenly what looked like a sure bet to pass relatively smoothly became enmeshed in politics.

House Republicans are insisting that Democrats put 103 votes — half their caucus — for the measure before the GOP provides the balance of the votes needed to pass it.
