Ring: Group joins together to award Aggie for achievements

being sent even after Natarajan had received his ring, they said.
Natarajan said he is still amazed at how they kept the operation a secret.
"How it all happened is totally a mystery to me," Natarajan said.
"They wouldn't tell me any details.
I'm still trying to figure out how they got my ring size. It's an exact fit."

Although Natarajan's ring is an exact fit, Bridget Hennessey, one of many who participated in the operation, confessed that the ring size was a guess.
"We really guessed on the ring size," Hennessey said. "We took the ring sizes of two guys about the same size as Ran Jan and ordered the ring on the bases of their average."

On the night Natarajan dunked his ring, 40 of his friends came to watch the event.
Amy Patterson, a close friend of Natarajan's, said she recalls how excited he was the night he dunked his ring.
"Ran Jan walked into the Chicken saying 'I'm on top of the world,'" Patterson said. "It took him about 45 minutes to dunk his ring."

Today as Natarajan walks through campus, he said everyone seems to comment on his ring, giving him a sense of how many people made the project possible.
For those who haven't heard his story, Natarajan retells it with a big smile, claiming that events such as this are indicative of the University.
"Something like this could only happen at Texas A&M," he said.

Even heroes need a hand.

Our firefighters. All of us in Texas are grateful to them. Every day they brave smoke, heat, exhaustion and fire to save our lives, our homes, our property. Every day they risk their lives. For us.

Firefighters have to live with the strains of a uniquely demanding job, one that does not always pay as well as it should. And even though these men and women are heroes to us, they have everyday problems just like we do.

It's time we gave them a hand.

The makers of Copenhagen® and Skoal® would like to help. We have been in Texas for generations. And now, as part of our continuing involvement in communities all across the state, we would like to give a little something back.

In 1994, the firefighters of Texas answered over 500,000 emergency calls.

That's why we've asked our consumers to join with us to support the Texas Firefighters Emergency Relief Fund. Co-founded by U.S. Tobacco Company and the Texas State Association of Firefighters, this new fund will provide timely aid to firefighters as they cope with their uniquely demanding lives.

To ensure this effort is a success, we will donate a portion of our smokeless tobacco sales over the next three months to help these heroes. This is our way to say thank you to them and all of you.

When the alarm sounds, they are always there. It's time we were there for them.

For more information, write to the Texas Firefighters Emergency Relief Fund, 1000 Brazos Street, Austin, TX 78701.
