By Alvaro State leaders just say no to minnows

Endangered species list may not include West Texas minnow

AUSTIN (AP) - The state's top leaders Tuesday blasted the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, saying the agency is out of line in proposing to list a West Texas minnow as an endangered species.

The fish, the Arkansas River shiner, is found in the Canadian River.

Gov. George W. Bush, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, House Speaker Pete Laney and Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry all said the minnow is doing just fine and that federal intervention could harm a major agricultural area.

'I say to the federal government, 'Leave us alone. We know what we're doing," Bush said. "We're people of good udgment. We care about our land. We care about our waters. And we know how to run our own business.

The Clinton administration first proposed placing the shiner on the federal endangered species list in August.

In a written statement, the Fish and Wildlife Service's Jerry Brabander said, "Within the last 20 years, this species has disappeared from over 80 percent of its historic range.

Public hearings are being on the proposal held this week in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. The federal agency said the fish once inhabited wide, shallow, sandy-bottomed rivers and streams throughout the Arkansas River basin in those states and New Mexico.

"Without the protection afforded by the Endangered Species Act, the Arkansas River shiner will very likely become extinct throughout its historic range in the foresee-able future," said Brabander, who is with the Fish and Wildlife Service in Oklahoma.

But Perry and Larry McKin-ney of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said information gathered by state biologists shows no reason to think the shiner is in trouble.
