Three ways to beat the high cost of college.

1. The Montgomery GI Bill

2. Student loan repayment 3. Part-time income

The Army Reserve Alternate Training Program is a smart way to pay for college. First, if you qualify, the Montgomery GI Bill can provide you with up to $6,840 for current college expenses or approved vo/tech training.

Second, if you have - or obtain - a qualified student loan not in default, you may get it paid off at the rate of 15% per year or $500, whichever is greater, up to a maximum of $10,000. Selected military skills can double that maximum. Third, you can earn part-time money in college, and here's how it works:

One summer you take Basic Training, and the next summer you receive skill training at an Army school. You'll earn over $1,500 for Basic and even more for skill training. Then you'll attend monthly meetings at an Army Reserve unit near your college, usually one weekend a month plus two weeks a year. You'll be paid over $105 a weekend to start. It's worth thinking about. Give us a call:

consecutive victories over Texas Christian and Southern Methodist.

The Aggies are looking to make it three in a row with a victory in the season finale, but head coach Tony Barone said Baylor has many weapons with which the Aggies will have to contend with.

"(Aundre) Branch is probably the best percentage shooter in the league," Barone said. "His three-point range is as good as anybody's. I think (Nelson) Haggerty is a quality point guard, and he hurts us every time we play them.

Magic defeat Rockets, 107-96

HOUSTON (AP) - Shaquille O'Neal's dunk with 3:47 to go Thursday night keyed Orlando's first victory in Houston, 107-96 over the Rockets. It was the Magic's fourth straight win.
The Magic, the NBA's worst

free throw shooting team, hit seven of eight foul shots in the closing minutes to put the game

Anfernee Hardaway had 30 points for Orlando, while O'Neal had 19 points and 20 rebounds. Clyde Drexler led Houston with 25 points, while Hakeem Olajuwon had 22. The Rockets never scored over the last 2:49 after O'Neal picked up his fifth foul and Vernon Maxwell converted one of two free throws to trim the Magic lead to 97-96. O'Neal followed that with a basket and drew a foul from Olajuwon. O'Neal, shooting 55 percent from the free throw line over the last 10 games, made the shot for a 3-point play and a 100-96 advantage. Maxwell, who had 18 points in his first home appearance following a 10-game suspension for punching a fan in Portland, missed three 3-point attempts in the final minutes, Brian Shaw, who had just two points in 10 minutes, kept Orlando in the game in the final period, scoring 11 of the Magic's first 12 points.

Buffin: Women's league would showcase talents of college ball

may offer some evidence to the contrary. women's basketball is too slow paced. There is no "Showtime," created league.

These players have a wide no dunks or other plays that make the NBA exciting to watch. They also argue that women do not have the same athletic ability that men do so the games would be totally different and would not appeal to fans.

While this may have been true in the past, women's games have picked up the pace. Women have gotten taller and are using weights to increase their strength.

For example, the three post players for the Lady Aggies, Kelly Cerny, Martha McClelland and Angel Spinks, who are 6 feet, 5 inches 6 feet, 4 inches and 6 feet, 2 inches respectively, are dominating on the inside. These type of players are emerging from exceptional collegiate careers and are looking for places to display their talents in the United States.

While interest may not have been there in the 1980s, it could be reinvigorated with the creation of a professional league. The talent that would be infused into the league would be huge. Players like Lisa Branch, Texas Tech's Tabitha Truesdale and UCLA's Lisa Leslie, just to name a few, Many people argue that would be great additions to a range of talents that they can contribute to an established league and interest would be Attendance at women's collegiate games has been on the rise, illustrating the interest that exists. At big time programs such as Tennessee and Stanford, fans fill the complexes to capacity. This illustrates that if the talent is there, the fans will pay to see it.

What the NBA should do is create a sister league which will be governed by Commissioner David Stern. There would be a Western and Eastern Conference with five to ten teams in each conference. The draft would be similar to the NBA but without the lottery. Players from abroad could also be eligible to play in the league.

The league should get at least a five year trial run to see how it works out and give it a fair deal. With the absence of baseball and the interest in basketball increasing, a women's league should be given a try and I am almost positive only success will follow.
