next several weeks."

Sung Won Sohn, chief economist at Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis, said a Fed effort to boost the dollar by raising interest rates could backfire by pushing the U.S. economy into a recession.

"The strategy now is for the Fed to lay low and hope the situation stabilizes," he said.

After trying without success Thursday and Friday to prop up the dollar's value by intervening in currency markets, U.S. authorities decided Monday the better course was to remain on the sidelines.

The dollar continued to drop, falling to 92.70 yen in late afternoon trading in New York, down from a Friday record low of 94.05.

It also declined against the German mark, dropping to 1.4028 marks, the lowest level in more than two years and down from Friday's close in New York of 1.4250 marks. The dollar was down against other major currencies as well.

Analysts would not rule out further coordinated dollar-buying by the United States and other countries such as effort last Friday by 18 central banks. But they said such purchases would be used primarily to make sure the dollar's decline is orderly and doesn't alarm markets.

That strategy appeared to be working. Analysts said U.S. markets were basically taking the dollar's weakness in stride.

On Monday, the Dow Jones industrial average managed to eke out a small advance.

However, the turmoil on the bond market continued with the yield on 30-year Treasury issues rising to 7.61 percent. Some credited the relatively minor impact on U.S. markets to a recognition that the underlying U.S. economy is basically sound.

The Fed's string of interest rate increases over the past year is widely perceived to be working to bring about a "soft landing" in which the economy slows to a sustainable pace without any serious pickup in inflation.

The slowing U.S. economy will help over time to reduce America's huge trade deficit, which is seen right now as the biggest negative influence on the dollar.

The generally positive outlook for the U.S. economy was highlighted Monday by a report from the Shadow Open Market Committee, a group of prominent private economists who monitor the Federal Reserve.

"For the first time in 30 years, the United States can achieve stable growth and low inflation in the near term," the group said. But it warned that if the central bank continues tightening credit "the probability of a recession in 1996 will increase."

Analysts said one of the biggest threats to their generally optimistic forecast remains the turmoil in Mexico, the United States' third biggest export market.

The Mexican peso fell Monday to a record low at 6.5750 pesos to the dollar, a drop of more than 40 percent since Mexico's currency crisis began Dec. 20.

Help Wanted

Dresser Industries, Inc. will be filling positions for hunting guides & bird dog handlers at its Mota Bonita Lodge during August-September 1995. These are seasonal positions lasting from September, 1995 to March, 1996. Starting salary is $325.00 per week including staff lodging, private bath, TV, three meals per day, & numerous benefits. The lodge is located approximately 20 miles south of Aflurrias, Texas & currently leases approximately 40,000 acres on the Encino Division of the King Ranch. These positions require a knowledge of hunting, firearms, firearms safety, & interpersonal communication skills that will allow the individual to effectively hunt with top level executives from around the world. Although these are seasonal positions, they offer the opportunity to obtain valuable experience in a highly competitive field. Many of our temporary employees move from employment with Dresser directly into permanent positions with firms in related fields. Interviews will be conducted in March, 1995. Interested persons should return application forms & schedule interviews with the Texas A&M Employment Office.
