Cycling team takes first in local meet

Staff and Wire Reports
The Texas A&M cycling team took first place in a meet held in College Station on Sunday. The meet was a five-man time trial of 40 kilometers.
The win came one day after the team took second place overall in a six-team meet held at Southwest Texas State.
On Saturday, the men's 'C' team of Jeff Dehaven, Clark Davidson, John Markaland, Eric Osterjard and Shane Binion finished first in their race and were joined in the winner's circle by Tina and Mia Scheufele who took first in the women's bracket on both days.
The men's team also produced a first-place winner on Saturday when the team of Davidson and Markaland took first at SWTSU.
The cycling team will return to action this coming weekend when they travel first to the University of North Texas and then to Midwestern State (Louisiana) to compete in meets.

Cruz: Junior shows apple doesn't fall far from tree

The public address announcer at the Dome got the already frenzied crowd to take the intensity level up even higher by leading the "Cruuuuuuuuz!!" yell for over two minutes.
With his classic exaggerated batting stance, Cruz worked the count and lashed a sinking line drive into right-center field. The crowd exploded for a moment, but out of nowhere came the Padres' center fielder to rob Cheo of one last highlight with a spectacular sliding catch.
The next season, Cruz signed on with the New York Yankees, but could never find his swing again, save once. Only days before he was released by the Bronx Bombers, Cruz launched a pinch-hit grand slam on a nationally televised Saturday afternoon game to win one for the Yankees.
I think that was the only time I have ever cheered for a New York team.
That was 1988. For the next few years, the Astros were not very good, and won no love from the fans by letting Nolan Ryan slip away to the Rangers, releasing longtime favorite Alan Ashby and trading Billy Doran to the Reds.
But during 1989, there was a new buzz in the air. Attending the same high school as me in Houston was none other than the aforementioned Cruz Jr., who looked and looks so much like his father it's scary.
Bellaire High School already had a heck of a baseball program when Cruz Jr. got there. The Cardinals were just three years removed from a state championship won in large part by Chuck Knoblauch, who was wowing the crowds at Olsen Field by 1989.
Cruz Jr. quickly made a name for himself at the high school level and by the time he was a junior it became apparent that he had inherited all of his father's baseball talent, plus immense physical prowess.
At the Texas High School All-Star game in 1991, Cruz Jr. crushed a home run into the leftfield power alley of the Dome, making the already-excited college and major league scouts in attendance practically drool.
After graduation, Cruz Jr. was drafted in the 15th round by the Atlanta Braves, but instead decided to stay at home and attend Rice.
His play there since has been nothing short of spectacular. In his freshman year he was named as a first-team freshman All-American.
Last season, he just missed winning the Triple Crown in the Southwest Conference as he put up a .401 batting average, knocked out 14 home runs and knocked in 68 runs. He put those numbers up in just 55 games.
If you run those stats through a 162-game schedule, they get really scary, but good scary.
We're talking 41 home runs, 200 RBIs and 85 stolen bases. Even half of those totals are All-Star caliber in the majors.
With the strike still unsettled, it would seem Cruz's future is a bit uncertain. But in fact, his magnificence on the field is one of the reasons that the two sides will eventually resolve their foolishness.
Cruz Jr. and players like him are too good not to be out there playing. Houston fans would surely like to see another Cruz loping across the turf in the Dome, but just having one in the major leagues, playing with other major leaguers, will be good enough for me.
