Committee sends gun bill to House for consideration

□ There were almost 40 changes to the bill including restrictions on carrying weapons into hospitals and the bar area of a restaurant.

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would allow Texans to obtain licenses to carry concealed handguns has moved one step closer to becoming law. The House Public Safety Committee voted 7-1 Tuesday to forward the bill to the full House for consideration. The Senate approved the measure last month, and Gov. George W. Bush has said he would sign it. "People are really concerned that they want to be able to have this basic right if they want to go through the process to get a license," said Rep. Bill Carter, R-Fort Worth, co-sponsor of the bill.

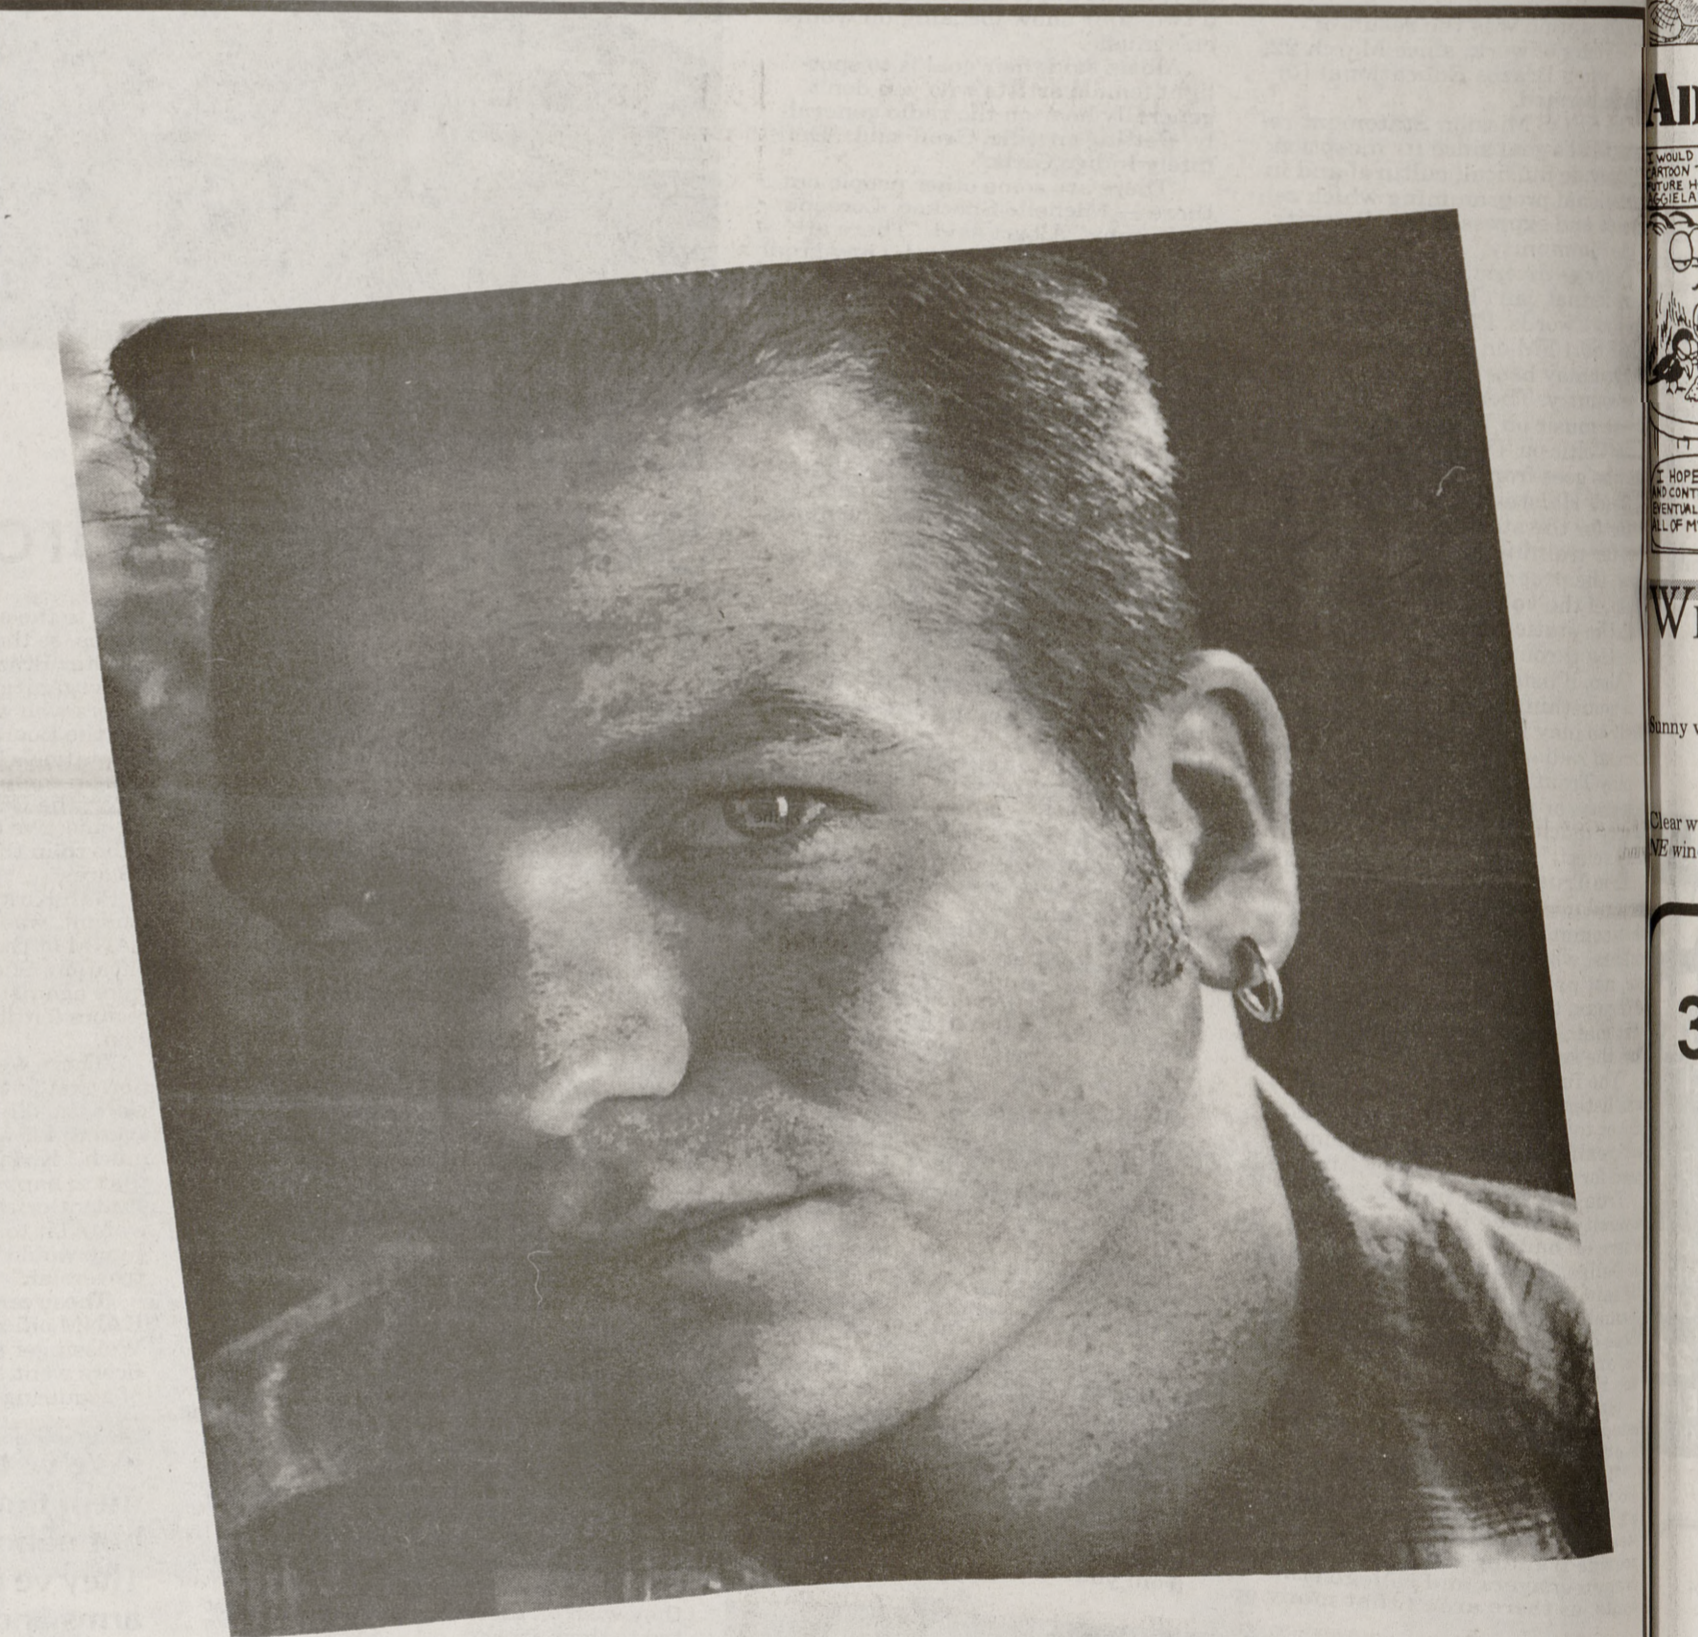

"Those people who are truly law-abiding citizens, who are concerned about public safety, those are the people who will go out and go through the process and spend the money and the time to get a license," Carter said. Eligible applicants would have to be legal Texas residents; at least 21 years old; never have been convicted of a felony; have not been delinquent in making a child support payment; and not be chemically dependent or of unsound mind. They also would have to undergo 10 to 15 hours of training and pass a proficiency exam. A four-year permit would cost $140. The House committee made about 40 changes to the bill, most of which are minor. They include revising a provision concerning open records and prohibiting permit holders from carrying guns into the bar area of a restaurant. The committee also added hospitals to a list of places where carrying guns would be prohibited. Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, the bill's author, said he supported all of the changes except the restriction on hospitals. "I do not like prohibited locations of any kind," Patterson said. "It just gives an opportunity

Rep. Vilma Luna, D-Corpus Christi, who cast the dissenting vote, said she would try to amend the bill on the floor to increase the number of required training hours to 40. She also wants the bill to require that part of those hours are spent on safety instruction. Other lawmakers also have vowed to try to change the bill.

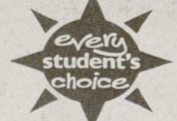

"You don't have a referendum on constitutional rights."
— Jerry Patterson, Sen., R-Pasadena

But Patterson rejected the idea of a voter referendum, saying he didn't think there is enough support in the House to approve the idea. "You don't have a referendum on constitutional rights," he said.

Just think of Easter as God meeting our need for proof.

God has never backed the idea of "blind faith." He wants us to have factual reasons to believe in him. Good evidence is important because Jesus never identified himself simply as a great moral teacher or as a prophet, but as God himself. We'd like to show you the reasons that people for centuries have concluded that Jesus really is God and wants to have a relationship with us.

Easter. It's proof positive.
