Plan: Population representation major focus of Plan

According to the executive summary, the University reviewed its hiring and retention of qualified minority faculty, administrators and professional staff over the time frame of the past two Texas plans. This assessment helped Texas set numerical goals for upcoming years.

College deans and the Department of Academic Affairs projected their needs, goals and resources for the next five years. Through these projections, the deans committed $8.5 million of their budget specifically to hiring minority and women faculty members during this five-year period.

Dr. Ray Bowen, president of A&M, is asking each of A&M's divisions, including academic affairs, student affairs and financial and administration, to complete similar studies to determine how funds can be reallocated toward the goals for hiring minorities.

Dr. William Perry, Dean of Faculties, said the Access and Equity 2000 should provide a positive force toward creating a more diverse workplace.

"We have gotten feedback from faculty members and the community," Perry said. "And this feedback helped us when assessing our problem areas."

Another goal of the University's Access and Equity 2000 Plan is to increase the number of women and minorities on governing boards of Texas public institutions of higher education.

While the University knows it has a limited influence on appointments to such boards, it does believe strategies can be taken to improve the situation.

The Plan's strategies include: encouraging external constituents in an array of different organizations to recognize the importance of a gov-verse membership in boards.

Catucci said an important part of the plan is that it be assessed by an implementation committee each year.

Although the Access and Equity 2000 Plan began with planning and reporting committees, he explained, the implementation committee will be responsible for checking each year to see if the plan is working. The implementation committee will get its information from five University-wide committees.

The information will be sent to President Bowen and to the Board of Regents.

"This check-system is an important detail because it helps decide what is best for the university on a year-by-year basis," Catucci said. "We can target specific problems and then search for solutions."

Corps." Ron Sasse, director of the Department of Residence Life and Housing, said the programs help the Corps reach its recruiting goals.

"The Corps' goal is to fill the Quad," Sasse said. "These programs help increase the Corps' size. They help recruit students into the Corps."

Owen Ross, RHA president, said that although the programs are beneficial to the Corps of Cadets, they came at the expense of non-Corps residents.

"These are two excellent programs," Ross said. "I wouldn't mind funding them if they benefited the entire campus or the residents, but I don't see how someone living in a non-reg hall could benefit from them."

The bill was passed with little opposition, although no representatives from the Corps of Cadets were present.

was contacted, but said he did not attend because he did not want to bow the issue out of proportion.

"Attending the meeting would only have raised the hysteria level," Segrest said. "There was no reason to cause a big commotion."

Although Segrest said that he encourages the RHA to look into the programs if it feels it was being cheated, he pointed out the differences between the Corps of Cadets and civilian housing.

"I think that it's hard to compare the two housing situations," Segrest said. "It's like comparing apples and oranges. The situations are totally different."

Sasse said his department has no other way to fund programs outside of residence rents.

"Any other source of funds has to come from the University," Sasse said. "We don't have funds other than the hall rents."

Sasse explained that the rates and fees for fiscal year have already been set, so no more could be taken until the next year.

Ross said that since there would be no change until next year, the RHA can pursue the issue.

"I guess that it's something the next group will have to handle," Ross said.

Department of Residence Life and Housing

Ross said he had contacted Segrest, the Corps Housing Office and Maj. Gen. Thomas Darling, Corps Commandant. Segrest acknowledged that he
