Topless TV on public access cable causes complaints

CORPUS CHRISTI(AP) - Three topless women shown last week on a local television show is testing Corpus Christi's new ordinance regarding public-access cable TV.

The 30-minute show, called "DogPhude," aired last week featuring two men, one of whom sat on a couch in what appeared to be a house. The other man barbecued chicken claws and hearts outside.

During Thursday's show, a videotape of three women in a wet T-shirt contest was shown. At one point, the women took their shirts off and danced topless.

TCI Cablevision Inc. received about 20 calls from viewers Friday complaining about the show, said Dennis Moore, general manager of TCI.

Moore said he previewed the program before its broadcast and that TCI officials decided that the city's legal department should study it to determine whether it is obscene.

"I am not particularly impressed by the program, but that is the nature of public access."

"I am not particularly impressed by the program, but that is the nature of public access," Moore said.

Until the city makes a decision, the program will be aired, Moore said.

Congress mandated in 1984 that cable operators set aside a percentage of TV channels for public-access to encourage independent programmers and bring diversity to the monopoly-driven cable industry. Cable operators cannot exert editorial control.

But programs judged to be obscene, libelous or slanderous can be excluded.

The rules, recently passed by the City Council, would take public access channel users off the air if they twice violate regulations prohibiting commercial and political advertising, lotteries and obscenity.

TCI officials said Saturday they did not know the name of the creator of "DogPhude." Names of registered public access users are public record; however, TCI offices were closed over the weekend.

The city's recently revised public access rules should begin next week, said James Bray, city attorney.

The tougher standards were in response to complaints about "Race and Reason," a white supremacist talk show.

The program featured a long-haired man who sat on a couch, criticized the Moral Majority and repeatedly said that if people didn't agree with his opinion, then they could "bite me."
