

Rockets set for Magic matchup

GALVESTON (AP) — Although they'll have to skirt around a hurricane to get to Orlando, the Houston Rockets like their chances against the Magic in the NBA Finals.

"They play the same way we do," Mario Elie said. "They've got a premier post-up player and they've got 3-point shooters."

Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said he expects an exiting series, with Hakeem Olajuwon squaring off against Shaquille O'Neal, but he's concerned about the Magic's wealth of young talent.

"It's a big challenge because they have so many weapons," Tomjanovich said Sunday night moments after watching Orlando beat Indiana in Game 7 of the Eastern Conference finals.

He downplayed the significance of Houston's experience as defending champion against an Orlando team playing in the finals for the first time.

"Everybody's going to make a big deal out of that, but they have so much talent," Tomjanovich said. "We didn't have much experience last year. We didn't have anybody who had won it except Earl Cureton."

"Hakeem had been to the finals as a young player but most of our guys hadn't been there. These guys, they've got a good coach, good players and a good system. They're quite capable of winning the championship."

Tomjanovich wouldn't say whether he'd stick with the same small lineup that started the last two games against San Antonio in the Western Conference finals. But he acknowledged he at least has that option, which he might not have had it against Indiana's bigger front line.

The Hakeem vs. Shaquille matchup "should be a classic," Tomjanovich said. "I know the fans are going to be excited about seeing these guys go against each other, but we always have to re-emphasize to the Rockets against the Magic not just that matchup."

Orlando routs Indiana, advances

The Magic make their first-ever Finals appearance by defeating the Pacers 105-81 in Game Seven.

Just as they promised they would, the Magic shrugged off Friday night's 27-point disaster in Indianapolis and used a hot-shooting third quarter to bury the Pacers and take a 19-point lead into the final period.

The fourth quarter was never close, thanks to a shower of 3-pointers, three by Dennis Scott and one by Hardaway. Scott's trey with 4:34 left made it 96-72.

Scott finished with 19 points on 7-of-11 shooting. Hardaway added 17 and Horace Grant 16. Reggie Miller, whose 36 points in Game 6 was the reason the Pacers were here in the first place, had only 12 and missed 8-of-13 shots. He left the game for good with 3:53 to play.

Dale Davis led Indiana with 15 points and 14 rebounds. Rik Smits had just 10 points in 24 minutes. The Magic, in their sixth season, reached the finals after playing only 20 postseason games. The last team to make such a rapid rise was the 1976-77 Portland Trail Blazers, who rolled all the way to the title.

Because Indiana could not win a single game away from its home court, the Pacers' season ended the same way it did last year, with a loss on an opponent's home court in a seventh game of the conference finals. Last season, it was a four-point loss to the New York Knicks, the team Indiana beat to get to this series.

They never recovered from their third-quarter shooting woes and got more and more rattled as shots bounced off the rim and the Magic got baskets in transition.

The Magic were so good, not even going 10-of-24 from the free throw line bothered them, mainly because they made 57 percent of their field goals.

Hardaway's defense led the way in Orlando's 20-5 spurt early in the third quarter had the Pacers down by 18 points with 4:48 left in the period. He went after every loose ball, triggering seven fast-break baskets as the Magic hit eight of their first nine shots in the quarter.

The Magic made 11-of-17 shots in the period, building their lead to 80-61 before Byron Scott hit two free throws to end the quarter.

The Magic hit six 3-pointers in the first half and their fourth of the first quarter gave them a 27-16 lead. The Pacers then outscored Orlando 14-3 to move ahead, but a cold spell allowed the Magic to take a 52-45 edge at halftime.

O'Neal had 17 points before going to the bench late in the half with two fouls. Smits picked up a second late in the first quarter and played only nine minutes in the half.

GEORGANDIS: Football team needs new look in '95

things are now, either the offense, defense or special teams is introduced as everyone cheers wildly and waves their 12th Man towels. This is good, but it could be better.

Picture this: An 8 p.m. kick-off time. Instantaneously, every light in Kyle Field goes off. Four maroon-filtered spotlights start blazing through the crowd, highlighting the 12th Man towels as the crowd works itself into a frenzy.

Suddenly, the stereo system kicks into Lenny Kravitz's "Are You Gonna Go My Way?" at the optimum decibel level for a stadium packed with 70,000 people. The starting team takes the field one by one, introduced by James Earl Jones.

The other team will be so intimidated the players won't be able to find their way to the bench.

Step Two: Lend a mysterious air to some of our players—amely, Leeland McElroy. What can separate him from the rest of the Heisman hopefuls? A name change, that's what. In fact, he doesn't need a name at all, a simple symbol will do—like the artist formerly known as Prince.

What that symbol might be would be left up to Leeland and the promotions people. It must inspire both great speed on 80-yard gallops down the sideline and great power on 10-yard bursts up the middle.

I suppose he could use $ as his name, but that would really only apply when he left for the NFL. Maybe a blend of the school seal, the Texas flag and the Heisman Trophy.

Step Three: Brandon Mitchell, our huge defensive end and Outland Award candidate, needs to start making some motion after every sack or tackle for a loss he makes this year. Some guys bow to the crowd, others point skyward and some even make the motion of swinging a baseball bat.

Mitchell's move would have to be totally unique, and to help him, R.C. Slocum needs to call on the Texas Aggie Dance Team. Somewhere in one of their routines must be something Mitchell can use to attract the camera's attention and delight the crowd.

I was thinking somewhere along the lines of doing the Windmill (an old breakdancing move), coming out of it with a back flip and ending it by doing the splits. I know it sounds tough, but this is for a national championship.

Step Four: Much like Nebraska's coach Tom Osborne last year, Slocum must be as boring as possible in every single interview. Osborne never said anything more than how he wanted only for the team to be proud and that he did not care about individual recognition. The Cornhuskers took the national championship, and Osborne became a media darling.

Slocum must take Osborne's game a step further by not speaking at all during the regular season. He can answer most questions by simply nodding or shaking his head. Immediate attention will be given to A&M as writers and commentators try to speculate on why R.C. won't open his mouth. Heck, he might even get on TV with Barbara Walters.

A simple four-step plan to win A&M a national championship. Now all the team has to do is avoid injuries, hope for other teams to be upset, win all their games, be invited to the national championship game and win it.

No problem.

Tettleton's six RBIs fuel Rangers' win

ARLINGTON (AP) — Mickey Tettleton homered twice and drove in six runs, breaking out of a 1-for-25 slump to back Darren Oliver's three-hit pitching over six innings and send the Texas Rangers past the Minnesota Twins, 7-6 on Sunday.

Tettleton, a DH in 35 of the Rangers' first 36 games, played in right field for the first time since July 19, 1994 and seemed to agree with him. His 4-for-4 game and six RBIs both matched career highs.

During his career with the Detroit Tigers, Tettleton played catcher, DH, first base and the outfield.

Tettleton, batting .150 in his previous 17 games, drove in two runs with a first-inning double and added a run-scoring single in the third.

Then he homered in the fifth and again in the seventh. The homers gave him nine for the season.

Meanwhile, Oliver (2-1), a converted reliever, established a career-high with seven strikeouts and walked three in his longest major league outing, helping the Rangers to their eighth victory in 11 games.

CAMP

atmosphere that exists here in College Station.

Not only Slocum's expertise is available to the campers. The entire A&M coaching staff will be at the camp along with former A&M players and coaches.

Each day of the camp involves five hours of practice and drills during the day and culminates with a nightly competition known as "Aggie Ball." The players divide up into teams and play each other on either Simpson Drill Field or Kyle Field, with the championship game being played on Kyle Field on the last night of camp.

Although the coaches know that not all of the players will play on the college level, and even fewer will play for the Aggies, Cassidy said their desire to help all the players is universal.

"Our goals for the camp are to maintain a safe environment for the kids," Cassidy said, "to teach them about the game of football and to ensure that they have a good time while visiting Texas A&M."
