Israel agrees to expand troop withdrawal from West Bank

□ The phased pullout will take two years. The PLO is expected to demand statehood for the West Bank.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel confirmed new details Wednesday of an emerging breakthrough on expanding Palestinian self-rule, but it also added a warning: attacks on Israelis by militants opposed to the peace process must stop.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres delivered the warning with the announcement that Israel's withdrawal from the West Bank will expand with phased troop pullouts from four towns before Palestinian elections this year.

Scores of Israelis have been killed in attacks in the 14 months since Palestinian self-rule was established in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank area of Jericho under the first stage of a September 1993 Israel-PLO accord.

The West Bank pullout is far more complicated than the first stage because 135,000 Jewish settlers live throughout the territory — compared to 5,000 in Gaza and none in Jericho.

Nonetheless, Peres and Arafat set July 25 as a target date for signing an agreement on a troop withdrawal. Peres said Israel plans a phased pullout from parts of the West Bank over two years, starting with four towns — Nablus, Jenin, Qalqilya and Tulkarm — before Palestinian elections are held late this year.

A Palestinian official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the initial pullout would begin four weeks after the agreement is signed and end at least 25 days before voting.

During the elections, arrangements would be made in the three other large West Bank towns — Ramallah, Bethlehem and Hebron — so that Israeli troops won't be present when Palestinians go to the polls, Peres said.

In the second stage of the pullout in 1996, Israel will leave other towns and villages, and Israelis and Palestinians will jointly patrol rural areas. A third troop pullback, from rural areas, will take place in mid-1997, Peres said.

Negotiations on the final status of the West Bank and Gaza, in which the PLO is expected to demand full-fledged statehood, are to begin by May 1996.

Speaker sells books, softer image

□ Newt Gingrich set out on a national tour "To Renew America" and introduce himself to potential voters.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newt Gingrich, calling himself his party's emotional leader, embarked Wednesday on a national book tour that coincides with the runoff to the presidential primary season. "It's all pure luck," he said of the timing.

The House speaker is taking advantage of it — both to sell books and introduce himself to potential voters in friendly book-and-author settings. "I think it will help people understand me better," Gingrich said in his book, "To Renew America" in an interview with The Associated Press. The book summarizes what he thinks ails the country and how he would fix it.

A packed schedule of interviews, radio shows, speeches and book signings Wednesday through Friday in Washington and New York is a prelude to a 25-city August tour. His stated objective is to sell as many books as possible. But Gingrich acknowledges there may be spinoff benefits as well.

Gingrich has been flirting with the idea of running for president ever since the Republican landslide last November and his elevation in January to the speakership. He said recently he would not make a final decision until Dec. 15, the deadline to file for the first-in-the-nation New Hampshire primary.

Like anyone else, Gingrich says, he wants to be liked by as many people as possible. It's unclear whether the book and tour will soften his image.

But any attention is good attention, the speaker says. "Being ignored is the worst thing. Being attacked is fine. Being praised is good," he said. "And if the usual suspects are attacking you, then all of your side knows, 'Oh, we must go read it.'"

Pentagon urges rejection of base-closure list

□ The Air Force may have the option of shifting the work done at Kelly Air Force Base to the private sector.

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the vexing question of what to do with the Air Force's depots hanging over the base-closings process, the Pentagon is urging President Clinton to reject an independent commission's list of proposed base closings.

Defense officials, speaking Wednesday on condition of anonymity, said Defense Secretary William Perry would recommend that the president remand the list to the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission with just one request for a change: McClellan Air Force Base in Sacramento, Calif.

The commission's recommendations to close Kelly and McClellan, two of the Air Force's five depots, have proved the most controversial of this fourth round of base closures. The Air Force argued vehemently against any shutdowns would disrupt its repair operations.

Closure of Kelly's depot would cost some 13,000 jobs. McClellan's loss would cost another 12,000 jobs.

In voting June 22nd to close Kelly's depot, the commission didn't mention the possibility of shifting Kelly's work to the private sector — which would allow San Antonio to retain thousands of good-paying jobs.

But by last week, when the commission's recommendations were forwarded in a final report to Clinton, the language had been amended to give the Air Force the option of shifting Kelly's work to "private sector commercial activities."

The Air Force is interpreting the commission's action on Kelly as a closure, not a recommendation to privatize, a spokesman said.

Allowing the Air Force to contract out Kelly's aircraft and aircraft engine repair work could allow San Antonio to keep thousands of jobs.

State agencies sued for violating disabilities act

AUSTIN (AP) — Three Texas attorneys sued two state agencies Wednesday, claiming the buildings that house the state's highest courts do not comply with the federal Americans with Disabilities Act.

The lawsuit, filed as a class action in a Travis County court at law, names the General Services Commission and the Texas Commission of Licensing and Regulation as defendants.

The plaintiffs — Chris Jonas, Matt Partin and a lawyer listed only as "T.A." in court records — claim the Supreme Court Building, the Tom Clark Building and the Price Daniel Building all fail to comply with federal law, which requires public buildings to be accessible to the disabled.

The buildings house the Texas Supreme Court and the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

"Among the violations we are alleging is the lack of automatic doors, ... the existence of sinks in the bathrooms that exceed the maximum height requirements and the lack of proper Braille signs," said James C. Harrington, legal director of the Texas Civil Rights Project, who represents the lawyers.

FBI expert testifies at Simpson trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rose-beige carpet fibers found on crucial evidence could have come from O.J. Simpson's Ford Bronco but not from the one given by his friend Al Cowlings, an FBI expert testified Wednesday.

The identification of tiny threads of fabric from clothing and carpets by FBI witness Douglas Deedrick comprised the prosecution's most aggressive effort to tie up loose ends of their circumstantial case against Simpson.

Returning from a four-day holiday break, the agent testified about fibers from the clothing of the two murder victims, from the Bronco carpeting and the cashmere lining of a pair of blood-gloves. His calm testimony wove a pattern supporting the prosecution's theory of the murders.

Deedrick used charts and pictures of the victims' bloody clothes to explain the fabric evidence to jurors.

The painstaking effort to isolate evidence in the case was demonstrated by Deedrick's testimony that only one carpet fiber was detected on each of the items analyzed. The witness noted, however, that carpet fibers are "big" as compared to others and are visible to the naked eye.

Asked the significance of finding the fibers on various items, Deedrick said: "It's significant from the standpoint of transfer. ... It is possible then to link all of these items together."

Federal Reserve considers cutting interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve policy-makers, who staunchly guard their independence, aren't likely to talk openly about politics during their deliberations this week. But with Chairman Alan Greenspan's term up next year, the question of whether to cut interest rates won't be the only matter on their minds.

Fed officials convened closed-door discussions Wednesday with pressure growing to cut rates to guarantee that the current period of economic weakness does not turn into a recession.

Whatever the Fed decides is likely to be an extremely close call. Private economists have been vacillating between predictions of an immediate rate cut and a belief that the central bank will prefer to wait until its August meeting because of mixed signals in recent economic reports.

If the Fed does opt for an immediate rate cut, the announcement should come Thursday afternoon, at the close of the second day of deliberations by the Federal Open Market Committee.

Right-wing punished in government shake-up

LONDON (AP) — Armed with a leadership race victory, Prime Minister John Major shook up his Cabinet on Wednesday, giving little to his party's bruised right wing and keeping the big jobs for like-minded loyalists.

But apart from firing the chairman of the governing Conservative Party, Major's approach was cautious for a leader who just won a last chance to save his unpopular government from electoral disaster.

In an extensive Cabinet shuffle, Major named a trusted ally, Malcolm Rifkind, as the foreign secretary. Rifkind was previously defense secretary.

Michael Heseltine, the flamboyant trade secretary and a likely contender from the left if Tuesday's leadership race had gone to a second ballot, was named deputy prime minister.

Michael Portillo, who was poised to challenge Major from the right wing in a second round ballot, was his Employment department merged with education and was promoted to Defense Secretary.

Major announced the new 23-member Cabinet a day after taking two-thirds of the vote in a challenge by the Conservative Party leadership by John Redwood, a right-winger who quit the Cabinet to run.

Major also sacked Jeremy Hanley, the party chairman, and replaced him with Brian Mawhinney, the former transport secretary.
