Cowboys get slow start at training camp

AUSTIN (AP) — After watching his team's first scrimmage, Dallas Cowboys coach Barry Switzer said Sunday he saw too many mistakes, mental errors and penalties.

And, oh yeah, the team's out of shape, too.

"We are not in good enough shape to go play somebody," Switzer said of a team that will scrimmage the Houston Oilers on Wednesday and open the preseason against Buffalo on Saturday.

"We had guys shoving and not pursuing the ball, slow getting up and getting back to the ball. But I'm not worried about it. We've got five weeks to do it. That's what camp's all about," said Switzer, who earlier in the week praised several veterans for being in great shape.

Four offensive and defensive units took turns running plays before 5,000 fans at a local high school stadium in nearly 100-degree heat. The team's star running backs, Emmitt Smith and Daryl Johnston, were kept out of action to avoid injuries.

The only touchdown of the day came with the third-team unit on the field. Oronde Gadsden, a rookie free agent receiver from Winston-Salem, caught a 48-yard pass from Jason Garrett, slipped by rookie cornerback Artis Houston and dove into the end zone.

Gadsden later appeared to have possession of another pass near the end zone before it was stripped.

GEORGANDIS: Where have all the heroes gone?

back Warren Moon. I figured it was another training camp story, probably in regards to the fact that 1995 will likely be his last season.

I was wrong.

Moon's wife had fled their Missouri City home after he reportedly choked her, slapped her and pursued her in his car. She returned home later and said she will not press charges, but Missouri City officials went ahead and did it themselves. Moon blamed the incident on "marital strain" and apologized profusely for it during a press conference Friday from his home.

This all comes less than a year after Moon was named in a sexual harassment suit by a Minnesota Viking cheerleader. Despite playing for the oft-controversial Oilers for nine seasons, Moon remained a pillar in the community. His Crescent Moon Foundation helped countless Houston-area youths enjoy better lives.

Maybe it hurts even more because Moon is a personal favorite. He was such an icon of Houston sports in his decade there. He was the big role model off the field and the valiant warrior on the field, giving it his all every Sunday, but ultimately always coming up just a little short.

Moon's image is now tarnished beyond repair. He is no longer an all-pro quarterback, not with the media's pack of dogs is on his trail.

The next day, trouble reared its ugly head in baseball.

Duke Snider made it to the baseball's Hall of Fame in 1980, which was the last year that Willie McCovey played the game. McCovey hit 521 home runs in his career and made it to the hall six years later.

Snider was so famous during his prime with the Brooklyn Dodgers that he was included in the popular 1950s New York tune "Willie, Mickey and the Duke" along with Mantle and Willie Mays.

Both men are all-time greats and both men were indicted Thursday on tax charges stemming from the sale of baseball memorabilia.

With the high demand for items from older baseball players, Snider and McCovey can make what used to be two months' salary in an afternoon at a baseball card show.

It seems both men thought they deserved a little more of the money than they were already given, and neither one did a very good job of reporting their earnings to the Internal Revenue Service.

The troubles of these four athletes are nothing new to the world of sports. It's almost like America's watching to see who will be the next hero to fall from grace.

Last year, it was O.J. Simpson. In years past, it has been Pete Rose, Darryl Strawberry, Dwight Gooden and Roy Tarpley.

Some athletes argue that they are unfairly expected to live by a higher standard than the rest of us because of their public exposure. Maybe that's somewhat justified, but it is a life they have chosen for themselves.

Hitting a ball is not a whole lot of responsibility for a man, especially when he is getting paid $5 million a year for it.

But the off-the-field responsibilities that go along with the job are monumental.

Wearing a jersey with a team's name and the name of a city automatically makes that person a representative of a corporation and a community.

Screwing up one's personal life goes a long way toward defaming the team and tarnishing the image of the city.

Keeping one's life clean and respectable is where a lot of the $5 million is earned.

Hopefully, others will learn from the mistakes made by Moon, Blades, Snider and McCovey. But, you would have thought those four men would have learned from the faults of their predecessors too.

Olympic flame route to pass through B-CS

ATLANTA (AP) — The ancient Olympians never saw anything like the Olympic flame, arriving in Angeles next April from Greece, travel by foot, horseback, train, steamboat and wheelchair across country until it reaches the stadium the opening ceremony of the 1996 Games in Atlanta.

Atlanta Olympic organizers Sunday revealed the route the flame, a new symbol of the Games, will travel a 15,000-mile, 84-day torch relay through 42 states. The last torch arrive in Atlanta on July 19.

An as-yet unidentified runner bring the torch into the stadium to light the flame that begins the Carnival of the modern Summer Games.

The torch will pass through May 19-22, making stops in Fort Worth, Dallas, Waco, Bryan-College Station, Houston, Beaumont and Orange.

Yankees crush Rangers with 11-4 victory

NEW YORK (AP) — The Yankees flipped off at Yankee Stadium on Sunday were hundreds of caps that the fans littered the field with after Don Mattingly hit a run homer that led New York to a 4 victory over Texas.

While Mattingly was the focus of the fans' affection, Jack McDowell treated tolerably by the crowd 32,765 in his first appearance since twirling his middle finger in a scene gesture at fans last Tuesday at a poor outing.

McDowell (8-6) heard a brief chorus of boos when his name was announced before the game, but that was the only negative reaction he received. He went six innings and allowed seven hits and two earned runs with 10 walks and six strikeouts.

It was the fifth straight win for New York, which moved within 5 1/2 games of first-place Boston. The Rangers lost their seventh in a row their longest slide since dropping eight straight in 1991.

May leads Astro's to 10th inning win over Giants

HOUSTON (AP) — Derrick May's two-out RBI single in the 10th inning Sunday rallied the Houston Astros to a 3-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants, still without Deion Sanders.

After Houston came back to tie the game in the ninth, Craig Biggio led off the 10th with a single to center field off Scott Service (0-1) and then scored second base.

After Jeff Bagwell flied out, Derek Bell struck out, Dave Magallan was intentionally walked prior to May's single to center field. Doug Mientkiewicz (3-1) pitched the 10th inning for the victory.

The Astros came from behind to win for the 11th time in their last 13 victories.

Pinch-hitter John Cangelosi led off the ninth with a double, was sacrificed to third by Orlando Miller and scored on pinch-hitter Tony Eusebio's sacrifice fly to right field.

The Giants lost their second straight and are still awaiting the arrival of Sanders, part of Friday's eight-player deal with Cincinnati that includes starter Mark Portugal, reliever Dan Burba and Gold Glove outfielder Darren Lewis.
