Poet's love letter offers rare insight

LONDON (AP) — A love letter from Dylan Thomas, promising to make his future wife happy "by not being a halfwit," was sold at auction Monday for $6,256.

The unpublished letter was rescued during World War II by a fishmonger who found it in a bundle of old newspapers in which he intended to wrap his fish. Sotheby's auction house said it was saved by one of Caitlin's neighbors.

The hard-drinking Welsh poet pours out his feelings for her in the letter, dated "Friday morning, I think."

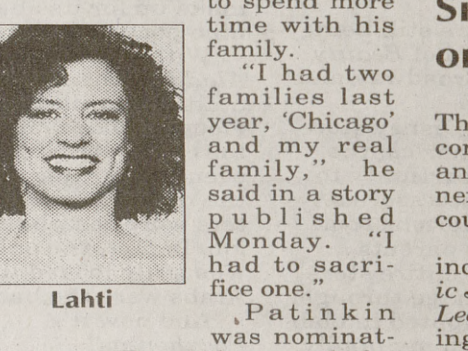

"I love you Caitlin, I love you more than anybody in the world," Thomas writes. "We'll have a bed in a bar ... and we shan't have any money at all and we'll live on other people ... and I'll try to make you happy by not being a halfwit."

Thomas died in 1953. Caitlin died a year ago.
